New owners carry on legacy of Holman Ranch

By DAVID LELAND

THOSE WHO knew Vivian Ogden Holman marvelled at the way she almost single-handedly took charge of the 400-acre Holman Ranch in Carmel Valley up until her death in 1981.

'This is heaven on earth; I never knew there was such a good life. I've never worked so hard or had so much fun in my life.'
— Dorothy McEwen

Now the work of Holman is being carried out by someone equally as exuberant and in love with the ranch.

"This is heaven on earth; I never knew there was such a good life," says Dorothy McEwen, who purchased the ranch with James Fitch earlier this year for $1.7 million.

Located some 12 miles into Carmel Valley, Holman Ranch is nestled on the hills about a half-mile above Carmel Valley Road.

McEwen, who is selling Cypress Stables in Monterey, and is a former partner in Digital Research computer firm, says she didn't plan to buy the spread — it just happened.

Indeed, it was Fitch, a former chef on luxury liners, who suggested they look at the property, which had been on the market for some eight years, and was selling for $2.35 million.

"I wasn't even looking," she says of her first visit to the ranch. Her opinion soon changed. "I said, 'This is it; this is where I want to spend the rest of my life.' "

To say McEwen and Fitch have their work cut out for them would be an understatement.

During the eight years the property went unsold, a myriad of people used the main residence as an illegal campground, crash pad and party hangout, the present owner says.

The result: weed-shrouded courtyards, crumbling mortar and general disarray of the building's interior.

"A variety of people lived here in the eight years," confirms McEwen, who is working 12 hours a day seven days a week to smarten up the property.

Also, two years ago, A&A Auction Galleries of Santa Cruz auctioned off the majority of the ranch's furniture, paintings and memorabilia.

Some items purchased in the auction include 18th century wall hangings, wagon wheeels, oil paintings, boxes of family photos, a baby grand piano and the Holman Ranch guest book.

The latter item could have laid truth to rumors that Charlie Chaplin and other Hollywood luminaries visited the ranch during its heyday in the 1940s.

Holman's Guest Ranch offered visitors horseback riding, swimming and fishing trips on the Carmel River for steelhead trout. One old brochure boasts that "no commercial atmosphere intrudes anywhere on the ranch."

As a show of good faith, several Carmel Valley residents have sold McEwen back some of the items they bought at the auction.

These gems include Holman's Spanish shawl, an art deco vase, prayer bench and an original couch and chair from the 900-square-foot living room.

DETAILS ARE sketchy, at best, on the origins of the ranch.

It is speculated that the main residence was built in the 1920s by a man named Ormsby, who, after suffering financial ruin in the stock market crash of 1929, sold the property to Clarence Holman, brother of the well-known peninsula civic leader W.R. Holman, in 1930 for $35,000.

At that point the property lines extended clear down to Carmel Valley Road, some 200 more acres than are included in the ranch today.

The main residence was remodelled in 1945, and is noted for its exquisite tile floors, open-beam ceilings and panoramic view of the Carmel Valley.

Upon her husband's death in 1962, Vivian Holman concentrated principally upon the Fate of Carmel's 'charm' draws capacity crowd

By NANCY HILLS

THE STATE and eventual fate of Carmel's legacy of charm drew about 200 people to a Carmel Heritage membership meeting Thursday night that focused on an upcoming historic/cultural survey of the city.

One elderly lady caught the mood of the crowd when she stood and denounced two large new homes built across the street from her that she said sold for almost $1 million apiece.

She wanted to ensure that her Carmel cottage remained undisturbed after her death, unlike the cottages demolished to make room for the new houses across from her.

"Money doesn't interest me. I want my old house preserved," she said as the audience cheered.

The group was quieter but still expressed its pleasure and displeasure during a slide show of new and old houses given by Carmel Planning Director Diane White.

"This house is under construction across the street from La Playa," White said while showing a picture of one of three "spec" (speculation) homes on Camino Real Street to a chorus of groans.

The slide show preceded the main topic of the evening: an upcoming border-to-border historical/cultural survey of the village.

The survey will begin as soon as historic preservation professional Gee Gee Platt and Carmel Heritage muster enough volunteers to complete the project. Platt was hired by Carmel Heritage to coordinate the project.

"Carmel has a more important history than many other small towns because so many famous people chose to spend their leisure time here," Platt said.

Carmel Heritage President Roger Newell asked for contributions to help pay for the survey. Carmel Heritage has received about $1,500 in seed grant money and matched that grant with $1,500 of its own, but the survey is expect to cost about $16,000. No funds have been received from the city.

Newell also requested people sign up as volunteers to work on the survey.

Platt, one of the guest speakers, explained the survey process to the crowd and later answered questions about preservation ordinances and laws.

The survey consists of volunteer walkers who will tackle every block in the city, recording specific architectural information and photographing each building along their designated route. Other volunteers will research each structure and the town's history.

"Over 203 surveys have been done in the state," Platt said, many of which have been used as the basis for books about the surveyed town.

She explained that a survey is an important step to identify historic, cultural and architectural resources. It is used for decisions on how and what a city wants to preserve.

"If you have an informed citizenry, going to the city council is easier," she said.

Another speaker, David Mills, a founder of the Pacific Grove Heritage Society, contradicted one person's assertion that city councils are in favor of preservation ordinances and cultural surveys. Pacific Grove completed its survey about two years ago.

"After doing an exhaustive survey, we found the city council was not enthusiastic at all," he said. "Not everyone was pleased to learn that little old shack is historic. It was not really amusing when you have been long-

Making a difference

Dear Editor:

After having read the last issue of the Pine Cone, it struck me that during Clint Eastwood's term as mayor of Carmel the media was full of positive comments by grateful citizens on behalf of his success in his role as mayor. Since he left that office there have been few, if any, comments regarding his continued positive influence on the community.

Some people have asked me if Clint's involvement and interest in the Carmel Youth Center was simply a "token gesture" to "look good" — especially while he was mayor.

On the contrary. It was he who expressed the need to bring the youth center back to life. That wish resulted in the present board of directors gathering together and forming a policy-making and administrative body. They rolled up their shirtsleeves and together with the help of Mr. Eastwood began renovating the decaying and long-idle facility. (This renovation process is still going on thanks to the generous response of the community at our fund-raisers.)

As a member of the board, Mr. Eastwood attends board meetings when his schedule permits, especialy those meetings which directly impact the continued existence of the center (such as appearing before the city council to request a lease renewal). He insists on receiving constant updates and progress reports on all phases of activity of the youth center.

It has always amazed me that this man makes every effort to make time in his life and a place in his heart for the kids in our little town. He reaches out to them, works out with them, stressing the importance of physical and emotional health in ther lives.

Here is the man, not the movie star, who hopes that a small gesture like the Carmel Youth Center will help keep our children free from teen suicide, drug and alcohol abuse and the many other dangers that face youth in today's world.

If Clint and the rest of us on the board can save just one child from these dangers that seem to lurk around every corner, then our goals have been realized.

And so, one year after the "frenzy," here is yet another "Thank-you Clint" for a heart filled with compassion and concern for our children and for helping us make a difference.

Flaunting pain

Dear Editor:

Pity the poor fun furriers. Very little fun. Their profits dwindle as the facts of fur merchandise are exposed. Few people want these wares.

A 50 percent slash in profits means little to the victims. Animals who have been killed by tortures too graphic to describe find no compensation in low prices for their pain.

The women who buy these grisly remains resemble comic relics in old cartoons, artifacts. But one's decision turns to anger because there is something worse than bad taste: these women are flaunting pain.

The final word

Dear Editor:

Well, now we have all gone and done it. Mr. McBride and I erred with regard to Mary Tudor.

Mr. Patrick Franklin is now forced to take his own advice. There is no such person as Mary I in English history. (Mary Stuart was Queen of Scotland, not England, and besides Mary Tudor, the only other Queen Mary was the wife of George V. She was called the Queen Mother, never Mary II. Referring to Mary I is the same as referring to the first American Civil War.)

As to James I, I am not sure what that was all about, but it, too, was incorrect.

See how easy it is to make a mistake on a subject we think we know so well? I assume it's all in good fun anyway.

Futile involvement

Dear Editor:

I find it fascinating to see how the Board of Directors of the Carmel Business Association, a group professing the maintenance of ethics as one of its goals, can continuously exhibit a lack of them.

As some people are aware, Art Lewis of nb Flowers, has been trying, for some time, to persuade the board to obey the association bylaws.

They have consistently ignored this responsibility at the monthly general membership meetings.

Since their attempts at intimidation and threats did not succeed in removing Art and because they were unwilling to conduct the meetings in the prescribed manner, Art's continual insistence has been perceived as an annoyance.

Now they have taken overt action to expel him from the association and, true to form, threatened legal action. (Apparently they have finally realized that in a voluntary organization the only REAL power is that granted to them by the members and if one of them challenges it, the revelation is consummate impotence!)

They have allegedly changed the bylaws so that the sole authority to make decisions is within the board, thus leaving the membership with no voice or vote.

Because they could not or would not adhere to the previous bylaws they are now an organizational anomie.

It is unfortunate that this board, perhaps guided by ego and fear, would carelessly toss away a man of Art's talents and ethics, or in fact any members, with such treatment.

I believe that Art will not be an intrusion at any future meetings of the Carmel Business Association. His involvement at such further events would be futile because when knowledge of right action is ignored, any accomplishment will then be tainted!

Heartfelt thanks

Dear Editor:

After a relatively short period of illness my husband died in our Carmel home. I would like to express my heartfelt thanks to Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula for helping me to care for him during this difficult time.

My special thanks go to team manager Sheila Rader, home health aide Billie Marcuson, nurse Jody Mechanic, and volunteers Pat Akard and Barbara Brewster, for whose moral support I will be eternally grateful. Also many thanks to occupational therapist Donna Aldrete of Central Coast Visiting Nurse Association. Not only for their professional competence but the loving, caring way they ministered to the two of us will always be remembered by me.

Sad Phenomenon

Dear Editor:

When, yesterday, I saw Bates' cartoon of the Parthenon of the Acropolis, with one tourist saying to the other, "I was here in '51 and it hasn't changed a bit," my first reactions were happy recognition and the expected little laugh.

But then I grew more serious, when I remembered having been there in 1936 and again in 1978 — and it had changed a great deal! The previously gleaming white structure had turned a sulphury yellow, and ropes and guards kept tourists from getting close enough to inscribe graffiti or carry away souvenir chips of marble.

It is a sad, worldwide phenomenon that the same humanity that created such works of wonder and beauty, and still does, also seems intent on defacing, destroying and desecrating them as well as nature around us, not apparently aware that we are all one, interdependent and interrelated with responsiblity to one another and to this glorious world we live in.

STUDENTS AT Bay School can't wait until the school's annual celebration, Bay Day, set for 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, May 6 at the school located one mile south of Rio Road on Highway 1 near Monastery Beach. Bay Day is the school's biggest fund-raiser of the year. (Joan Brophy photo.)

Bay School celebrates its 110th with annual Bay Day celebration

ON SATURDAY, May 6, Bay School — the Little Red Schoolhouse on Highway 1 — will celebrate its 110th Bay Day.

From 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., the public is invited to enjoy children's games, pony rides, a variety of food, a silent auction, a drawing and fun for the whole family.

The Grand Prize for three for this year's benefit drawing is a five-day/four-night stay at the Buena Vista Palace Hotel and three day passes for three to Disney World. The prize also includes round-trip airfare from San Francisco to Orlando, Fla. There are 50 other prizes, donated by local residents, businesses and restaurants.

Also present will be local author David A. Anderson and illustrator Donald Jones, who have recently published the successful book, What You See You Can Be! There will be a gooksigning underway in the upstairs classroom — near the bake sale.

Bay School is located south of Carmel on Highway 1, one mile south of Rio Road on the ocean side of the coast. The school was built in 1879 by the whalers who lived at Point Lobos. Over the years, many famous local families have been part of Bay School's history — including the Hudsons, Kodanis, De Amarals, Rileys, Hattons and Martins. A few of Bay School's scrapbooks will be on view to the public.

The proceeds of this event go to help Bay School continue its long-standing tradition as a 50-family co-operative preschool. Proceeds from last year's Bay Day helped the school purchase a new fence to replace the old metal-and-turkey-wire fence that had become rusted and dangerous. Since the Carmel school district couldn't afford a new fence, it was up to parents to come up with the funds.

"Without the support of the community, this would not have had a happy ending," says Jessica Everingham, a Bay School parent. "Because Bay Day was a huge success last year, the parents had the money to buy our own fence. Peninsula Fence constructed a top-quality cyclone fence over spring break and everyone became a good deal more comfortable about going back to school."

Children and adults of all ages are welcome to attend the annual event. For more information please call 624-4397.

Council upholds planners' ruling on R-4 zone

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL City Council Tuesday night upheld a planning commission's determination that R-4 district developments are to be judged by the district's current zoning, which allows nearly twice as much floor area than any other zone in the city.

'Personally, I feel it has less to do with interpretation of the general plan than it does with a state of mind about what is appropriate for particular developments.'

— Jim Wright

In a confusing hour-long debate, the council determined that the R-4 district should not come under the same development guidelines as the commercial district.

It also directed the planning commission to move as quickly as possible in developing new standards for the R-4 district, which is basically bounded by Third and Fifth avenues and Mission and Torres streets.

A draft environmental impact report on a specific plan for the area is scheduled for release next week.

The vote was one issue that prompted Carmel Residents Association president Barbara Brooks to tell the council she was having a "problem understanding who is in charge" of the city.

Councilman James Wright brought the R-4 zoning issue before the council after the planning commission, during a review of a proposed condominium project, decided to use R-4 zoning despite a staff report that maintained the general plan says it is in a commercial zone, which is more restrictive.

Current R-4 zoning allows a much higher maximum of 160 percent floor area ratio to a building site.

The issue was just one of several recent decisions by the planning commission that have been appealed or brought before the council by councilmembers. Those include the paving of Sunset Center lot, policies on permitting new motels and hotels in the city and condominiums.

"Personally, I feel it has less to do with interpretation of the general plan than it does with a state of mind about what is appropriate for particular developments," Wright said late in the discussion.

The general plan was changed in 1987, after the R-4 zoning ordinance was approved; the general plan takes precedent over any ordinances.

Wright said he believed that the current R-4 zoning ordinance is not in compliance with the general plan and cited places in the general plan and as well as in other documents that refer to the R-4 district as a commercial area.

Recent changes in the commercial district reduced the maximum allowed floor area ratio on a building site to 90 percent. Floor area ratio refers to total building square footage, including the first and second floors, versus the total square footage of a building site.

The debate about whether the R-4 is considered a commercial district or a separate district revolved around maps contained in the general plan, one of which identifies the R-4 as commercial, and other city documents that identify the district as commercial.

Wright's motion to leave the decision on whether or not the R-4 is commercial undecided but limit the floor area ratio (FAR) to a maximum of 90 percent was not approved after Mayor Jean Grace decided not to vote in favor of the motion.

Heuer says moratorium necessary to avoid hurting the environment

By NANCY HILLS

A MORATORIUM on at least new subdivisions may be necessary to avoid environmental devastation of the Carmel Valley, according to water director Dick Heuer.

Heuer has asked that the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board consider abandoning its allocation system in favor of prioritizing the types of new water connections it will issue until a new water supply project has been completed.

Heuer estimates that 1995 is the earliest any dam can be completed and maybe as long as the year 2000.

Projects that should get new water connections, he recommends, are projects in process, lots of record, public projects, low and moderate-income housing and remodels that do not increase water use.

Heuer refers to his plan as a "phase out" because "it phases out new growth while avoiding an absolute moratorium."

A request to send the proposal to a committee then back to the water board in June is scheduled for the water board's meeting at 7 p.m. Monday, May 8 in Monterey City Council Chambers.

Heuer argues in a letter to water district manager Bruce Buel that the report "clearly" shows that action on the allocation is "urgent."

Water district chairman Nick Lombardo said that he was "still analyzing Heuer's letter" and had no comment as yet.

Heuer also suggested that Lombardo and vice chairman Paul Davis may have conflicts of interest in voting on the issue. Lombardo, president of Ranco Canada, has developable property and Davis is an architect.

Lombardo denied that he has any conflict of interest because he has not filed for any permits.

The district's timeline for action on the EIR is at least January 1990, when the final report will be certified. Passage of any ordinance will be delayed until May of that year because discussions and legal requirements will delay any final action at least until then, Heuer wrote.

He based his recommendation on information contained in an environmental impact report on the district's allocation process. The allocation system divides the available water supply among the municipalities within the district.

The report also discusses the pros and cons of raising or lowering the non-rationed level of permitted water production on the peninsula.

Right now, the district has a production cap of 20,000 acre feet a year during non-drought years. The peninsula uses about 18,400 acre feet, 1,600 acre feet below the cap, and demand is increasing. Most of that demand is supplied from water from the Carmel Valley watershed.

The "phase out" would replace the 20,000-acre-foot cap. Instead, new water connections would be issued for the permitted categories.

The EIR states that "existing demands" already are having "significant adverse impacts" on Carmel River riparian vegetation and potentially adverse impacts on the Carmel River lagoon wetlands, wildlife, aesthetics of Carmel Valley and recreation,

Mello calls hearing on water issues

STATE SEN. Henry Mello has called a public hearing on water issues for May 5 to allow the public to air its views on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and for the district to discuss its water supply project plans and answer questions.

The meeting is scheduled for 6 p.m., Friday, May 5 in Steinbeck Forum, Monterey Conference Center.

Mello sponsored the legislation that created the district in 1978. The meeting was called after the public expressed concern that the district has not moved quickly enough in providing a new water resource for the peninsula, according to a press release from Mello's office.

"There have been a lot of people inquiring about the progress made and about the district," Mello said. "Since I carried the legislation I think I owe people this opportunity."

Mello said that the hearing was not scheduled to begin the process of disbanding the district, which some critics have called for.

"Not as far as I'm concerned," he said. "The work still has to be done by some entity. If you shift from one agency to another, there will be some time lost in pursuing a water supply project."

Mello said that from his review of other water supply projects in the state that it takes a very long time to get a dam on line.

"There has not been a dam built on a coastal stream for 30 years in this state," he added. "It is very difficult to build a dam."

The district will make a 45-minute presentation, then answer questions.

A resource panel will consist of Steve Macola, California Senate Agriculture Resource Committee; Tom Weiland, legislative council; Louis Beck, department of water resources; Brian Hunter, state Department of Fish and Game; Jim Bybee, National Marine Fishery Services; three representatives from Army Corps of Engineers, Col. Tim Coffey, Karen Mason and Roger Golden; and Rob Leidy of federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Individuals or groups requesting additional information or who are interested in providing testimony at the hearing should contact Kathy Huston at Mello's Monterey district office, 373-0773.

Big Sur's Captain Cooper School wins state award for excellence

By DAVID LELAND

CAPTAIN COOPER School, the Carmel school district's smallest operation, has received top honors from the state Department of Education for its quality student performance.

On May 25, educators representing the Big Sur elementary school will travel to Southern California to receive their California Distinguished School Award.

"I think we're all delighted and that school is very deserving of the award," said Vance Baldwin, assistant superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District.

Kindergarten/first-grade teacher Paula Walling agreed, but said teaching at Captain Cooper is more than enough reward.

"The award is like a wonderful affirmation of all that we do," she said. "Teaching here is wonderful in itself; you don't have to have an award. It's an award each day you come to school."

Baldwin added that he is glad that the out-of-the-way school, guided by Principal Bob Douglas, did not get passed over because of its location.

"Although it's a small school, the staff is obviously dedicated to the students," Baldwin said. "It's a family operation; lots of attention is given to the students, we're proud of their achievements."

Captain Cooper School, nestled just off of Highway 1 in Big Sur, was one of 234 elementary schools statewide receiving the award.

"In this fourth year of awards, we have been impressed by the continuing efforts of educators and students to improve the quality of schools," said state Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig. "We are seeing a strong, supportive network being developed among past and present distinguished schools working together for the benefit of our students."

The Distinguished School Awards are part of the comprehensive California School Recognition Program, which was launched in 1986 with the recognition of 60 middle schools and 30 high schools.

In 1987 the first group of elementary schools was recognized. Awards are given to middle/high schools and elementary schools in alternate years.

Distinguished schools are selected for being the best in their particular grade span and socieoeconomic group, based on either their rank or improvement in reading and mathematics on the state Assessment Program for test grades three, six and eight.

'Although it's a small school, the staff is obviously dedicated to the students. It's a family operation; lots of attention is given to the students, we're proud of their achievements.'

— Vance Baldwin

— CUSD

Officials also look for improved student attendance, how the curriculum has improved, how involved the staff is with students and instructional practices.

Each site is visited and the award application validated by professional educators from the state Department of Education, county offices of education and local elementary schools.

"I am very appreciative of the ongoing assistance given to our state staff by the local county and district staff," Honig said. "Only with the help of the county coordinators and local principals were we able to visit the 239 finalists."

ing for a time when it can be replaced by something."

After the public learned about historic preservation, the idea caught on and the council eventually changed its mind.

"Little by little, the government decided it was a good idea and now is very much behind it," Mills said.

But it took a lot of "fighting and kicking" to get it through, he added.

Age in not what constitutes a historic/cultural/architecturally significant building, Platt explained to another questioner.

"San Francisco has no age limit on what is a landmark," she said.

SOME OF the questions went back to the problem: what can be done about the increasing number of Carmel cottages being demolished?

Mills said that Pacific Grove has a moratorium on demolition of buildings constructed after 1926. Property owners who wish to demolish a structure that falls into that category must go before an architectural review board to get a permit.

Platt said that very few cities prohibit demolitions. The usual method is to institute a law which places a hold on demolitions for at least six months. That gives the city or other interested parties time to negotiate alternatives to demolition or arrange to purchase the property.

"I think I can safely say that in San Francisco we have not lost a significant landmark in the 23 years," Platt said after the meeting. San Francisco approved a demolition-delay ordinance 23 years ago.

Demolitions in Carmel are reviewed by the planning commission, White said. No law requires any review of historic or architectural significance, but the city staff includes that in commission members' information packets, she added.

The city currently has no demolition delay or any other kind of preservation ordinance. The commission only reviews a demolition to determine if affordable housing would be lost. Demolition is also allowed if the demolished house is replaced with affordable housing.

In answer to the woman's question about how to preserve her home, Platt said she could put an historic easement on the home.

AN HISTORIC easement, Platt explained after the meeting, is a legal restriction placed on the property that prohibits any changes to it without the permission of the easement holder.

A non-profit organization can act as the easement holder, she said.

"A city should not be used as an easement holder because it is a political entity. The easement holder should not be subject to politics," Platt said.

She went on to explain that many people fear a historically significant designation attached to their buildings, but change their minds after they find it can actually increase the value of their property.

"After a while, people find that many people want to purchase a historic building. We have never seen the value of a piece of property decrease because of its designation as significant," Platt said.

Platt was very involved in the development of preservation laws in San Francisco. The move to institute such laws started in the neighborhoods and was carried out through changes in zoning.

"In San Francisco, there was a great deal of pressure in some of the neighborhoods to look at the city (in regard to) its present use rather than its 'highest and best' use and it was zoned to reflect that desire," Platt said.

Council puts time limit on meetings

THE CARMEL City Council voted to not start any new items on its agenda after 9 p.m. during council meetings.

If any items are left on the agenda for discussion, the council will schedule a special meeting the following Tuesday.

Councilman Ken White expressed concern that the item itself came late on the agenda and most of the public had gone home, so no one was there to speak on it.

"I would like to get some feedback on this change," he said.

Council upholds planners' ruling on R-4 zoning

Earlier in the discussion, Grace had said to Wright that "basically, you are saying we don't want a FAR greater than 90 percent anywhere in the city. I can relate to that because I certainly don't want a floor area ratio in Carmel greater than 90 percent."

Councilmembers Elinor Laiolo and Bob Fischer also voted against the motion, declaring they did not believe the district is commercial and that the standard was too strict to allow development of multi-family dwellings.

The R-4 district was intended to provide a buffer between the residential and commercial zones and an area where apartments could be developed.

"We need housing stock," Fischer said.

Planning commission chairman Olof Dahlstrand defended the commission's decision, also citing numerous legal instances where the R-4 has been referred to as a residential zone.

"This decision would be very, very far-reaching," Dahlstrand said. "Opinion is a very, very dangerous thing to base decisions upon."

During the meeting the council decided to study the issue of banning condominiums more before making a final decision. The commission had sent a letter to the council outlining reasons it believed banning new condomiums may be harmful to the city.

The council had requested the commission develop language for the general plan that would prohibit new condominiums in town, but the commission felt that there were valid reasons to permit them.

After the vote on the R-4 district and during the discussion on the condominium issue, CRA's Brooks told the council that "I'm having a problem understanding who is in charge. My understanding is that the council makes policy. With the planning commission asking the council to change its mind, I guess I wonder if it is a case of the tail wagging the dog. Who is running this city?"

"I'm not going by that bugaboo of who's wagging the tail. I know who is in charge here, but if someone is doing a good job they should be commended," Fischer said later in reponse to her comments.

In other agenda items, the council:

• Approved the final version of the transient rental ordinance which prohibits the rental of single-family residences for less than 30 days. It will become law in June and the city is expecting lawsuits to be filed against them on the ordinance.

• Approved a law that requires a permit to cut down a pine, cypress, oak or redwood with a trunk 6 inches in diameter or greater on private property.

• Denied an ordinance that would have changed the appeals process. Representatives of the CRA objected to the stringent legal requirements and the council agreed.

• Approved a new fee schedule but removed a provision that would have charged a fee for parking in the dirt lot on Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue or in the city hall parking lot during weekends.

• Approved a charter for the Architectural Preservation Committee and requested applications for the five positions.

Correction

COUNCILWOMAN ELINOR Laiolo pointed out at Tuesday's city council meeting that she had been misquoted in The Pine Cone.

It was reported she quoted Joyce Kilmer's poem as "I think I shall never see a poem as wonderful as a tree". The word "wonderful" should have read "lovely." The Pine Cone regrets the error.

Form of moratorium needed

Heuer wrote in a paper on the allocation system.

The demand has "destroyed the steelhead run," Heuer states in his report.

In a letter accompanying Heuer's report, the director states "Our water supply problems won't be over when the rains come (hopefully) in November or December. We have an equally serious long-term problem. We have to plan now for the next dry spell."

Heuer points out that the EIR states that the number of times the peninsula will have to go on rationing will increase once the demand reaches 20,000 acre feet.

Water shortages will occur "about twice as often" and "rationing will be more frequent, more severe and last longer than under current conditions," Heuer wrote.

The EIR was developed after the city of Carmel sued the district when the city reached its allocation limit.

The EIR reviews the formulas for distribution of water available among the cities for current and future use.

The EIR's analysis of the distribution formula gives Carmel and Seaside more water than it gets under the present distribution plan and takes water from other municipalities in some of the formulas.

That will trigger a "dogfight" among the jurisdictions within the district, Heuer claims. Prioritizing water connections would avoid a conflict between the cities.

At the city of Carmel's request, the mayors of the peninsula voted to discuss a moratorium on new connections similar to Heuer's suggestion, but only during the drought.

News notes:

Water workshop set for May 11

WATER WATCHERS — and who isn't in these days of rationing — will want to attend the Carmel Valley Property Owners water workshop to be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 11, at at All Saints' Episcopal Day School on Carmel Valley Road. The subject will be the environmental impact report on water distribution just released by the water management district.

This EIR dealing with basic problems of water allocation over the years ahead has been termed "The most important EIR written to date on the Monterey Peninsula." The allocation program carried out by the water management district determines how much water is available for use by the six cities and the unincorporated areas of the peninsula.

Speakers at the CVPOA May 11 workshop will be Bruce Buel, manager of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, and Robert Greenwood, chairman of CVPOA's water committee. They will explain and interpret the EIR and have available a simplified synopsis of its content.

Among the EIR's findings is a conclusion that the peninsula is already using and allocating more water every year than can safely be done under present dam and aquifer capacities.

After brief remarks by Buel and Greenwood, much of the meeting will be devoted to answering questions from the audience. The meeting is open to all CVPOA members and the general public. The workshop is being offered as a service to its members by CVPOA. Max Chaplin, CVPOA president, will chair the meeting.

For more information please call 659-4936.

Swim-gym complex meeting May 6

THE CARMEL Area Community Swim/Gym Board of Directors will hold a workshop at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, May 6, in the Carmel Middle School Library to review the status of a proposed 50-meter enclosed pool and gym.

The complex is slated to be located on the vacant grounds adjacent to the middle school.

During the meeting, potential users and community representatives will have the opportunity to provide input into the project and voice their expectations and concerns.

The results of the meeting will enable the swim/gym committee and San Francisco-based architects Thorton/Anderson to proceed with development and conceptual design ideas for the proposed project.

For more information call Sandy Sandstrum at 625-2852.

Eastwood responds to Lombardo on Canada Reservoir

FORMER CARMEL Mayor Clint Eastwood has responded to water board chairman Nick Lombardo in a widely distributed letter regarding Lombardo's request for more information on Eastwood's Canada Reservoir proposal.

The letter, addressed to Lombardo, says that the California Department of Fish and Game had proposed a similar project as the Canada Reservoir in 1986.

The Canada Reservoir is being jointly proposed by Eastwood, contractor Alan Williams and California-American Water Co.

The concept is to dam a canyon bordered by three properties, including Eastwood's Carmel Valley land, and pump water from the aquifer up into the resulting reservoir. The canyon itself has little runoff to fill the reservoir.

Lombardo's letter requested information on the project so it can be evaluated in the environmental impact report/statement on the peninsula's water supply projects.

Eastwood's letter says that a meeting of district staff, Cal-Am representatives and Williams' representative Michael Waxer, had included discussions on scheduling requirements for information.

Cal-Am has a team of professionals working on the proposal, Eastwood's letter says, and added that the Fish and Game Department's proposal had demonstrated that there was enough water to supply the reservoir.

A district response to the Fish and Game Department's proposal outlines the areas it believed the department's proposals were in error.

"As to the urgency to model the performance of the Canada Reservoir, I don't think we should let any premature computer run with premature information compromise the possibilities of this project," Eastwood's letter says.

Eastwood says, and Cal-Am has assured him, that they can meet the same timeframe for the Canada Reservoir as the district will on their project.

Lombardo said he had just received his copy of the letter and had not had time to review it, but said that the district is "interested in analyzing any alternative."

Parking survey set for May

THE CARMEL Business Association, in conjunction with the city and the mayor's parking committee, will be conducting a parking survey during the month of May.

The needs assessment, which will poll business owners, seeks specific data on auto usage by particular businesses and employees, and is also soliciting additional input and opinions from shop owners.

Once the data is tabulated, which CBA spokeswoman Kathy Ritter said would be sometime in June, the organization will use the figures to make input into affairs concerning Carmel.

Planning commission set to review gourmet food store

THE CARMEL Planning Commission will review an application to put a gourmet food store in a building at Junipero Avenue between Fifth and Sixth avenues next week.

The commission will meet at 3:30 p.m., Wednesday, May 10 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

Also on the agenda is a residential care facility on Lincoln Street near Seventh Avenue.

Painting crews to be out at night on Carmel streets

LATE-NIGHT DRIVERS in Carmel are asked to be particularly careful from 3 a.m. to dawn while driving in the city.

That's because the city Public Works Department will be painting street markings between the hours of 3 and 11 a.m. Monday through Friday through Sept. 1.

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

By Henrietta Stern

Responses to common questions

TODAY'S COLUMN focuses on commonly asked questions about our new water supply project. As you know, much staff effort, time and money has been invested in bringing a new project on line. Let's explore why and how.

QUESTION: Why do we need a water project?

ANSWER: Our problem is inadequate water storage, not water supply. Unfortunately, the existing two dams on the Carmel River hold only a small portion of normally plentiful annual flow and only one-seventh of our annual use. Thus in a series of dry years such as 1986-1989, surface storage is quickly used up and we are forced to pump limited ground water reserves.

QUESTION: In 1987, citizens voted for a dam. Why can't the district proceed with construction?

ANSWER: A simple answer to this question is, "We need permission." However, any water supply developer, private or public, must receive permission from a variety of federal and state agencies before construction can begin.

QUESTION: Why does it take so long to get these permits?

ANSWER: The main tool used by state and federal agencies to decide whether or not to grant us a permit to build a dam is an Environmental Impact Report and Impact Statement (EIR/EIS). State and federal laws require that the district perform numerous studies for an EIR/EIS. Detailed and comprehensive information on how a proposed project and several alternatives to the proposed project would affect the environment must be included. An EIR/EIS for a dam is typically a voluminous document that takes several years to prepare because of the complexity and detail required.

QUESTION: When will the new dam be completed?

ANSWER: Water delivery from a new dam would most likely occur by 1995 or early 1996. This schedule might be shortened if state laws that govern the election to fund the dam are streamlined. The district is working with Sen. Henry Mello to shorten and streamline the election process.

QUESTION: What are some other alternatives besides a Carmel River dam that are being studied?

ANSWER: Two dams on the Carmel River are being analyzed: dams at the New San Clemente site and the New Los Padres site. Both would be significantly larger than the existing dams for which they are named. Tributary dams that will be discussed include dams on San Clemente Creek, Chupines Creek, Cachagua Creek and Canada de la Segunda Canyon. Other options such as dredging, new wells and desalination will also be discussed. Conservation and reclamation are included as part of each alternative. By law, the "no project" alternative will also be analyzed.

QUESTION: There seems to be so much emphasis on fish. What about the people here who need a new source of water?

ANSWER: The Carmel River has one of the southern-most wild runs of steelhead trout. This fish population is very important to several state and federal agencies that influence our ability to obtain permits to build the dam, as well as sportmen's groups who have protested the district's water rights permit application. In addition, many local citizens want to see the river habitat restored, especially in the lower Carmel Valley. A healthy habitat for fish usually indicates a healthy riparian (streamside vegetation) corridor, reduced erosion damage, higher water tables and increased birdlife and other aesthetic or recreational values that benefit people.

All this means that the district must consider the impacts of any project on the steelhead trout and its habitat. It must mitigate impacts to fish (by releasing springtime flows, for example) or risk permit denial.

QUESTION: Won't construction of the dam create more growth?

ANSWER: Construction of any new water project provides water that can be used for drought reserve and/or new growth. Construction of a dam does not create new growth, per se. The planning agencies and elected officials in each city and county area within the district approve building permits for new homes and businesses. The district's policy has always been to provide water for planned growth as defined by the general plans of each city and the county. It should be noted, however, that state law would likely regard any new water project as "growth inducing" because the new water supply would remove constraints to growth.

QUESTION: What is the district doing in the meantime to provide more water?

ANSWER: a new dam is clearly the most cost-effective means to provide adequate drought reserve and water supply for many years to come. In the meantime, conservation and reclamation are the best methods to "generate" more water supply by reducing demand.

The district has developed a comprehensive long-term conservation program with a goal of 15 percent reduction in demand by the year 2020. This means more than 3,000 acre feet of water that isn't available now would be available in the future. Means to ensure conservation include the free retrofit kit give-away and a rigorous conservation ordinance. The district is also facilitating funding for a reclamation plant to water golf courses in Del Monte Forest with reclaimed wastewater instead of valuable drinking water.

QUESTION: Why don't we dredge the existing reservoirs? Wouldn't that provide water at a lower cost than a dam?

ANSWER: Dredging both San Clemente and Los Padres reservoirs would not significantly increase water supply or provide for future water needs. Total reservoir storage today is about 2,500 acre feet. If completely dredged, the two reservoirs would hold 5,170 acre feet, or only 29 percent of normal annual Cal-Am water demand. The remaining 71 percent would be pumped for ground water, which contributes to environmental damage along the Carmel River.

Dredging is less expensive than a dam in terms of upfront costs, but is about three times more expensive per acre foot of yield. It could have significant environmental impacts to fish and other aquatic life from disturbed sediment. Finding a suitable disposal site for more than three million cubic yards of sediment and trucking or conveying the sediment to the disposal site are major problems.

QUESTION: Why isn't the district pursuing desalination since we live adjacent to Monterey Bay?

ANSWER: Desalination is a process that converts saltwater to drinking water by removing the saline impurities. Desalination is technically feasible, but is very costly compared to other locally available alternatives due to the high power consumption involved. Thus most desalination occurs in the Middle East or similar areas where less expensive sources of water are not available. Local concerns include finding an adequate site, the cost of power, and disposal of the concentrated chemical brine that is produced during the desalination process.

New owners carry on work of Holman Ranch legacy cattle-grazing aspect of the venture. She moved out of the main residence to one of the guest cabins, choosing to use the main house as a museum. She listed only her telephone number in the phone book and let the guest-room rental take care of itself.

"Someday we'll have the whole story," says McEwen, who is attempting to piece a history of the ranch together. "But now it's coming in dribbles."

For the present McEwen is ecstatic to have the opportunity to manage such a large portion of land.

"My wildest dream was to someday have five acres (of land)," she says.

Now she has rented out a portion of her open space for a neighbor's grazing cattle, boards horses (her daughter Kristi Kildall takes care of these), and has installed a solar heater for the swimming pool. The property also includes a theater, guest homes, vegetable gardens, corrals and a duck pond.

"I've never worked so hard or had so much fun in my life," she says, adding that she is planning to level out some ground in front of the main house for a game of croquet, played on the original 1930s set.

Financially secure enough not to have to necessarily open the ranch up as a commercial venture, McEwen says she is taking a wait-and-see attitude when it comes to the future.

"It will evolve...whatever happens, happens," she says, adding that some options include reopening the guest ranch, agricultural use, rodeos and community theater. "We can do anything we want."

McEwen says she has already been in touch with one center for abused children, and has offered the ranch for special activities.

"The right things will happen," she says of her new-found home. "It will be good for me and good for the community."

HOLMAN RANCH co-owner Dorothy McEwen is attempting to restore the 400-acre Carmel Valley landmark to its original state. Heré she displays a vase from the guest ranch's heyday during the 1940s. (David Leland photo.)

Great Scott scored early and held the lead to win 7-3 over Copies by the Sea on April 27. Colby Huston (3-for-4) hit a grand slam inside-the-park home run; teammate Kevin Witherall went 2-for-3. CS batter R.J. Minard hit 2-for-2, and Russell Chaplan doubled. GS pitcher Ryan Bailey struck out nine of 13 batters, including three in a row in the final inning.

On April 29, Copies picked up a win against Carmel Realtors, 12-7. In a major league play, Reid Roberts (CS) sacrificed his body on the fence to make an outstanding catch. Leading CS hitters (all 2-for-3): Brian Christensen (with a home run and double), Russell Chaplan (double), Chris Spilfogel (double). CR's Michael Yee also hit 2-for-3 and doubled; Tommy Gerken doubled, and Dylan Pappas and Bhajan Johnson singled and drove in runs. CR's Ryan Travaille showed a good glove at first base. Matthew Chatham hit 2-for-3 and Colby Huston doubled for the winners; Ben Cook (BS) doubled and made a great high fly catch in the fourth.

In a close game April 29, County Mounties took an 11-10 win from On the Beach. Hitting two apiece for OTB were Aaron Baker (double), Kent Wehde, and Daniel Palshaw; Sandy Greenfield also hit well. CM's Ben Armbrust (3-for-3), and Michael Cohen (2-for-2, 2 doubles, 5 RBI), were leading hitters, Machael Foudy doubled, with 3 RBI. Joey Macaluso (CM) and Daniel Palshaw (OTB) were noted for good work in the field, while Trent Nishiguchi was strong on the mound for the winners.

PINTO: CARMEL Bay Co. lost to Med Market on April 25, 25-11, despite a home run and good fielding by Adam Struve. Dania Akkad (MM) tripled with 3 RBI; Lee Lightfoot batted 3-for-3, Leah Bordon was 2-for-2, and Eric Clark and Mike Gasperson drove in runs. Clark and Ricky Firebaugh combined on a double play.

In a big-hitting game April 27, Med Market topped JJ's Shoes, 20-18. Emma Healy batted 4-for-4 and Eric Suttoung 3-for-3 for JJ's; also contributing hits were John Woytak, Jesse Christensen, Carl Weiner, Seth Perkins, Robin MacMillan and Bret Warner. MM's hot bats: Joey Gasperson (4-for-4), Brendan Kinion (3-for-3), birthday boy Mike Dorey (2-for-2), Ricky Firebaugh (triple, 5 RBI), Adam Buck, Dania Akkad, Izaiah Williams, Keith Sames, Lee Lightfoot and Christina West. Arielle Baker (JJ) and Michael Gasperson (MM) doubled. JJ's Brian Boitano, Eric Suttoung and Nick Barett were solid fielders; Sames really hustled for a put-out at third.

Lloyd's Shoes won on April 29 against Bruno's, 19-11. Frank Bruno smashed a grand slam; home run hitters for the winners were Trevor Fogg (with two), Eva Real and Chris Foudy. Jakob Hendrix (L) and Erren Franklin (B) went 3-for-3. Keath Moon (L) tripled twice; Jason Martin also tripled, and Natalie Rutherford doubled. Double plays were credited to Frank Bruno, Joey Goldman (L) and Trevor Fogg (L).

ROOKIE SOFTBALL: Carmel Stamp and Coin defeated the Fort Ord Ravens on April 29, 13-2. Summer Emmons tripled; Bridgette Herbert and Kelly Savod doubled. Also hitting well were Cameron Cox, Brittany Holley, Laura McGowan, Chelsea Allen, Page Peterson, and Jenni Schock. Emmons was effective at first base, with several put-outs (three unassisted).

MINOR SOFTBALL: Despite an early lead by the Toro Spirits, the Carmel Plaza Sandpipers scored on hits by Malia Seltzer, Illona Simon, and Rosie Munger in the final inning to win the game 10-9. Simon pitched well for Carmel, as did Toro's Barker; Toro's Ellen Gleason helped slow the Carmel hits with a good glove in left field.

CARMEL MUST PROVIDE ROOMS WITH BOARD

From various parts of California and from the east there are being received daily applications for entry to the classes of university extension and to the arts of the theatre courses, under the auspices of the Theatre of the Golden Bough.

A number of Carmel and Monterey householders have signified their willingness to house these students, but there is a further call for accommodations, a number asking for rooms and board.

Having invited these people here, it is up to the Carmel residents to see that sufficient accommodations are afforded.

The period is from June 9 to August 9, or portions thereof. Those wishing to rent should communicate with the secretary of the Theatre of the Golden Bough.

VOTERS TO CAST BALLOTS FOR HIGH SCHOOL SITES

Voters of the Sunset school district will cast ballots Tuesday on their preference of high school sites, the Hatton Ranch site across the highway, southward from the end of Ocean avenue, and the Paradise Park site, along the east side of Carpenter street.

The school board has stated its preference for the Hatton Ranch site of 22 acres, which adjoins the highway for 1100 feet and is 950 feet deep. It is rectangular in shape and about 16 acres are regarded as suitable for buildings and playing fields. The price is $31,000.

The polling place will be the Sunset school library. The poll will be open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

NO MORE BEER ON CARMEL BEACH

Another old Carmel tradition died last night — eating abalone and drinking red wine on the beach could cost you 180 days in jail and a $500 fine. It's not the abalone; it's the wine, or any other intoxicant. Actually, the drinking of alcoholic beverages in public places has been illegal since before any of the present city officials can remember; but previous city councils have not told Carmel police to enforce Section 620 of the Municipal Code on the beach, allegedly because some councilmen didn't want to give up having a beer-by-the-sea. But litterbugs have left our beach in a deplorable condition, and usually the litterbugs are the ones who have beer parties, then simply get up and leave the mess behind.

BUSINESS GOOD IN CARMEL DESPITE GASOLINE SHORTAGES

Business is booming in Carmel despite — or perhaps because of — the gasoline pinch.

Merchants in the gift, restaurant and motel business were sometimes embarrassed to admit that their sales have jumped anywhere from 15 to 25 percent over the same period a year ago.

Explained one merchant: "Carmel is virtually recession-proof, depression-proof and gas rationing-proof."

No doubt, fewer people are visiting Carmel. Gasoline worries have cut into the numbers of tourists who flock here.

"Sure, the numbers are down," agreed Carmel Police Chief William Ellis. "But this town is always so busy, it's difficult to tell how much we've lost," he said.

WATER DISTRICT DIRECTORS READY TO DEBATE ISSUE OF CARMEL RIVER UNDERFLOW

An attempt to resurrect a Monterey Peninsula Water Management District application for rights to the underground source of water in Carmel Valley could be made at the next water district board of directors meeting May 14.

Discussion of the matter is bound to set off more water district controversy but directors John Williams of Carmel Highlands and Patricia Bernardi of Carmel Valley appear ready to face the brunt of the inevitable flak.

Flowers, flowers, flowers

NOTHING LIGHTENS the heart in springtime like flowers and a lovely garden. Everyone on the Central Coast had her/his heart brightened by the very first Central Coast Garden Show at the Monterey Fairgrounds given by Friends of the Hospice last weekend.

Literally hundreds of volunteers worked for more than a year to bring to the community "The Best of California Living" with 38 enchanting gardens, garden rooms, window boxes, 17 lectures and demonstrations, entertainers, educational displays, funnel cakes, a croquet tournament and a Sunday Brunch.

Horticulturists, landscapers, architects, florists, interior designers, garden clubs, societies, amateurs and pros worked with the show's general designer Richard Murray of Monterey.

People came from as far away as Australia. Well, not exactly. The former Abasssador of Australia and Nauru Bill Lane and Mrs. Lane (publishers of Sunset magazine), were honorary chairspersons; as were Mrs. Raymond Chrisman and Mrs. Robert Stanton.

Actually, the CCGS began two days earlier with a demo/lecture by Sheila Macqueen VMH, flower arranger for the Royal Family of England (who graciously donated her efforts to Hospice). The Pebble Beach Co. donated the Spanish Bay Ballroom for the lecture, which ended up with an SRO attendance.

Isabel Crossen, lecture co-chairwoman with Margaret Oliver (another former Britisher), engaged Mrs. Macqueen while on a visit to England last summer.

Not only did Mrs. Macqueen donate her time for the lecture but she cut her own flowers from private gardens in the area, thus saving the cost of flowers. She thoroughly enjoyed her garden forays, saying that it is one of the joys of flower arranging, looking for materials and placing them in plastic bags.

She demonstrated one stunning arrangement after another using chicken wire to hold flowers in place. "In Oregon," she said, "I used something different. They asked if they could use turkey wire instead. So I did. After I left I'm told all the stores completely sold out of turkey wire."

She prefaced her remarks with, "I love flower arranging. It takes no intelligence." Later she added, "The more advanced you become, the simpler you become." She brought a lot of humor along with tips and suggestions: it's better to put arrangements against the wall; use greenery for hallways; use a dull finish container and adapt arrangements to the shape and size of the container.

If you do flowers a day ahead, spray or mist and put plastic over it. Be aware of the art of color.

One of her stories pertained to an assignment to do flowers for the French Embassy. She was told she couldn't use table flowers because it would destroy the bouquet of wine. That's the French!

She loves to go on material hunts and once cut some of her neighbor's flowers. She felt that she should apologize, knocked on the neighbor's door, and when the lady's husband came to the door, Sheila said, holding the flowers, "I'm sorry, I suppose you call this vandalism." He replied, "I don't know. I have no idea what the Latin name is for anything."

Margaret O. in her thank-you remarks noted, "Sheila not only has a way with flowers but also she has a way with words." The arrangements were given as door prizes to delighted guests. All of her books were sold and orders were taken for more.

A preview gala on Thursday evening brought hundreds of people to the garden show fantasyland at the fairgrounds. One of the first exhibits seen upon entering was a tribute to the late Dr. Thomas Ainsworth, who worked on the show with Carvel van der Burch, and, unfortunately did not live to see this first CCGS.

The evening was a delightful discovery of gardens, hidden nooks, art fashions by Elan and an award ceremony announcing the judges' decisions. Emcee Dr. Paul Woudenberg, Mrs. van der Burch and Michelle Comeau presented these awards: "Best in Plant" to Robin Stockwell of The Barnyard, Carmel; "Best in Design Native Garden" to Tony Brancato, Pebble Beach; "Best in Design" to Scott Parker and Hillary Lipman; and "Best of Show" to Kevin O'Keefe and Gene Fryberger, Pebble Beach Co.

Gifts were presented to Mrs. Eugene Schrader, president of Friends of Hospice, to Mrs. Bill Lane; to Mrs. Raymond Chrisman, who also received the "Gardener of the Year Award"; and to Mrs. Tom Ainsworth in honor of her husband, to whom this first garden show was dedicated.

SPRING FLOWERS FURNISHED the program inspiration for the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services Spring Luncheon. These dedicated members, who operate the MPVS Thrift Shop on Broadway in Seaside year-round only allow themselves one social occasion per year.

Decked out in spring bonnets and attire they entered the Fiesta Room at Hacienda to discover bouquets of red roses on each table. They were the creative work of Jo Owen with the assistance of VP Jean Waner. Favors came from I. Magnin and Merle Norman.

BARBARA BEARDEN, Carvel van der Burch (general chairwoman of the Garden Show), and Beverly Ambort, chairperson of the volunteers, came to learn about flower arranging, Royal Family-style from Mrs. Sheila Macqueen.

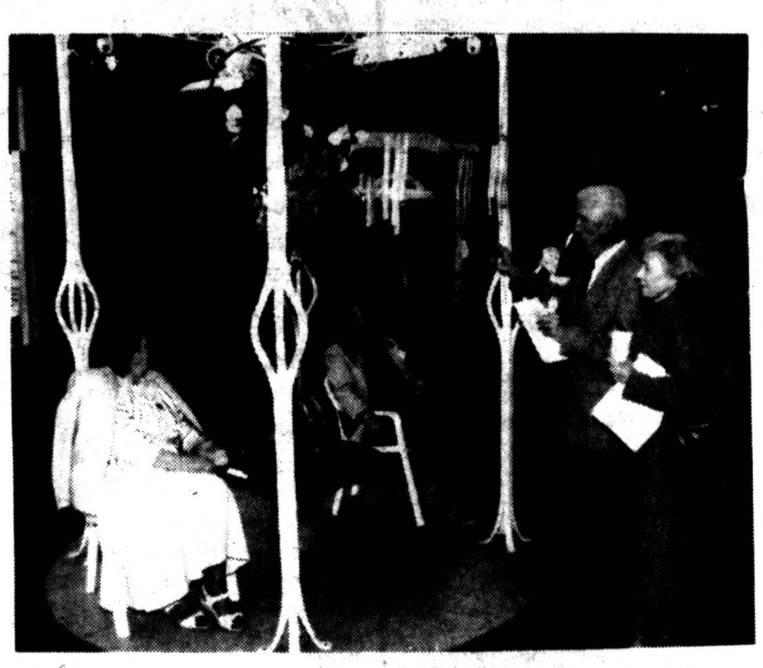
MRS. SHEILA Mcqueen demonstrated the art of flower arranging at the Inn at Spanish Bay in a benefit for Hospice.

AUDREY SCHRADER, president of Friends of Hospice, who had just received a gift for her efforts for the Central Coast Garden Show, with honorary chairwomen Mrs. Raymond Chrisman and Mrs. Bill Lane.



FLORENCE AND Milton Williams sat under a gazebo by their garden display at the Hospice fund-raiser and talked with Dr. and Mrs. William D. Brincklow of Carmel.

THE CHOCOLATE Garden at the garden show was only a small portion of the food served at the Preview Gala. Cheryl Ferch, who along with her husband Don and their Contemporary Catering furnished the gala's food, shown with Jim Roetman and Peter Weiland of Willow in Pacific Grove.

BETTY RODDEN and Mary May Altenburg, who were co-chairpersons for the garden show, with Jerry Prothro, chairman of the garden clubs and societies participating in the event.

What could be more fitting as a program than a floral arrangement demonstration? President Hazel Meidell introduced guest speaker Susan Whitman of Pacific Grove Floral Co., who designed three floral bouquets for the ladies. One of them went to Donna Johnson as a door prize. Also one lucky lady at each table took home a centerpiece of roses.

The spring luncheon is a well-deserved reward of fun and relaxation, but, now that it is over, 364 days of work must be done before there is another day off.

TRIBUTES AND AWARDS were in the springtime air. Monterey County high school students, who have distinguished themselves through their artistic achievements, were honored as California Art Scholars.

A luncheon and ceremony, hosted by the Monterey County Cultural Council, was held at the Officers' Club at DLI.

MCCC president Roderick Dewar welcomed VIPS, the students and their parents, his board of directors and the MCCC staff. He introduced Assemblyman Sam Farr, vice chairman of the Joint Committee of the Arts for California.

Mr. Farr said, "We live in a place of natural art as well as a community rich in the arts." He pointed out that "Where there is art, that's where corporate America wants to go." He asked, "Can you imagine New York City without the arts?".

Sam stated that California has students studying the arts that number more than the whole population of Michigan. But that is not enough for him and for others who want to make art part of the mainstream of education by requiring a year (or more) of visual or performing art training.

"Other states and countries send people to find out about California's amazing diversity. Creativity is the key to that diversity," he said, "but we need to do more."

Sam Karas and Karin Strasser Kauffman thanked the teachers and parents for their roles in promoting the arts. They presented medallions to Paige Bradley of Carmel Valley, who came with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Gene Bradley; Wendi Hansen with parents Mr. and Mrs. Bud Emory; Tandy Armstrong, with parents Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Armstrong and teacher Pat Watson; and Sara Bergman with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bergman, and her brother, Tim.

Kathy Huston presented Certificates of Recognition from Sen. Henry Mello, who is chairman of the State Arts Committee.

These honored students will attend the California State Summer School For the Arts largely due to the El Paso Natural Gas Co. with its financial support to supplement the state funding for this program.

THE MAGICAL ISLANDS of Kokomo was the trip taken by the seniors of Monterey High School, when they chose the Beach Boys hit record (Kokomo) for the Fifth Annual Senior Class Fashion Show to raise $$ for a gift to the high school.

The graduating class of '89 put in more than 200 hours preparing the show with director Heather Edgar (senior class rep), and Linda Frye, producer and senior class advisor. Sean Graham was the guide through the tropical isles of palm trees and tropical flowers.

Six hundred supporters came out to see 36 seniors in their professionally choreographed routines and showing their considerable talents to the best advantage.

MEMBERS OF THE Monterey Bay Chapter of American Institute of Architects and guests were entertained by Mrs. Robert Stanton in her Carmel Valley home.

Becoming a Fellow of AIA is as high as an architect can go. The late Mr. Robert Stanton was the first Fellow in the Monterey Bay Chapter of AIA, and Mrs. Stanton started a local award in his honor several years ago.

"APRIL SHOWERS BRING May Flowers" was the theme of a fashion celebration to honor the past presidents of the Junipero Serra Parents Club at the Monterey Sheraton Hotel.

The fashion show and luncheon was put together by Susan Henderson and Nancy Movahedi with Susan as fashion commentator introducing some 34 student models and six adults.

The idea was a shower of flowers, and the finale featured a stunning picture of pastel umbrellas for the April showers as flowers were tossed to guests.

THE QUESTERS, ADOBE chapter of MP, has donated to several projects in Butterfly Town USA and they are directing their efforts to the restoration of the Bell Tower on Chautauqua Hall at the present.

Celebrating 20 years of the fun of seeking and the joy of finding, the Questers held a Tea Party in Chautauqua Hall. Nadine Annand planned the tea and introduced speakers who updated plans for this historic landmark: Erma Dinkel, president of Chautauqua Hall Preservations Society, PG City Councilman Don Gasperson, and John Miller, PG Recreation Dept.

Maxine Seilor of Pajaro Valley Questers presented a check for the proposed bell tower restoration. Lola George and Jessie Lou Whitaker received gifts as co-founders of the local Antiquers.

Questers from Oakland, San Jose, Santa Cruz and Watsonville were served refreshments, including a slice of birthday cake.

IT SEEMS THAT to ensure a sell-out party, all you have to do is recreate The Civil War. That's what the Service League of Santa Catalina School is doing for the Gone With The Wind costume ball at Stonepine Estate May 6th.

Even though there was no pressing need for any hoopla to sell tickets, a sneak preview for the event of the decade was held at Monterey County Bank, a sponsor along with Stahl Motor Co. and Stonepine. Creating an atmosphere of fun were carriages, hooped skirts, Civil War uniforms and Robata's food.

Even if you forgot to buy tickets for the GWTW/Civil War party, tickets are still available for a chance to win an auto. For a mere $200 you might drive away in a 1989 Mercedes Benz 190E 2.6 Litre Sedan.

"We'll take this one"

BMW 5 SERIES

By Jim Johnson

World's best midsize luxury sports sedan

BMW's NEW 5 series is a loaded Magnum, a missile waiting to be launched, and is built for sheer velocity. Cliches used to describe the world's best-handling sedan have all been exhausted. Its overpowering performance so overwhelms the balance of the new 5's portfolio of efficiency, comfort, luxury and safety that these practical talents have been overshadowed.

The beautiful reshaped gently rounded body, for example, yields a lower drag coefficient of 0.31 without resorting to Japanese wedge aerodynamics. Posed with landmark settings such as the Lodge or Cypress Point, its design heritage blends appropriately with traditional architecture.

Contained within the 5's smooth new exterior is a crash-worthy rigid design of deformation safety zones, collision sills and impact boxes that allows the body to stay intact while absorbing impact 35 percent greater than legal standards.

Should a collision occur the 5 Series onboard computer activates the warning signals, turns on the interior lights and unlocks your door. White driving up the coast on Highway 1, I was able to sight the silhouette of a hightailing loose horse at a distance of two to three times father out thanks to BMW's round ellipsoid headlamps, which legally increase illumination and reduce kickback from fog. Driving through rain and hail on outer Carmel Valley Road I mistook both the wiper systems automatic sweep/speed adjustment to pressure and wind speed, and the acoustical signal which warns of icy road conditions as malfunctioning electronic wizardry.

Command of the electronics/computer are at your fingertips. Although advanced beyond, the electronics are limited to safety and improving operating efficiency. By compiling driving patterns over a period of time BMW's third generation of motor electronics signals need for service upon demand as opposed to set intervals. The majority of my neighbor's 14,000 miles of driving in his new 525i have been long distant marathons. To date his service needs have been limited to a couple of $30 oil changes.

BMW 5-SERIES TRAVERSING HIGHWAY 1

Ergonomically the dash is a textbook — superb analog gauges, auxiliary controls positioned where they belong with a console large enough to serve as a functional tray. New multi-zone cushioned seats are beyond improving. At first they appear firm but after a minute or two of driving they hold you where you should be supported without notice. Polished wood from the 7 Series would draw the leather seats and the mohair head liner together. Every interior amenity, including individual driver and passenger temperature settings and the best, without exception, eight-speaker sound/cassette system I have heard, are standard.

Driven very hard on rough-smooth-rough-smooth surfaces is when the true blood line of the old and new will have you talking to yourself. Yes, this is the same highly tuned suspension format — Macpherson struts in front, semi-trailing arms rear that has carved BMW's reputation for all-out sedan performance. New twin tube gas-pressure shock absorbers improve ride comfort over various surfaces. Don't misunderstand. Cutting tricky left-rights-left-rights on top of Los Laureles Grade, the new BMW passes a line with the quickest. It is passing over the inconsistent road surface on River Road at triple digit speeds that the generous travel of the twin tube shocks responds with silky ride luxocomfort while maintaining cat-like control. On River Road the strong late afternoon wind did not affect high-speed stability. BMW claims the new body shell reduces front and rear lift by 50 percent.

Scores earned for its powerful brakes make the 5's finest statement of depth. Impressive huge discs: front 11.9-inch vented, rear 11.8-inch solid, along with anti-lock (ABS) are standard. Add to the underpinnings of a perfectly (50/50 front-to-rear weight distribution), balanced rear-drive sedan, stabilizer bars and BMW's exclusive rear Track Link suspension which minimizes front-end drive. Now wait for a cold rainy night to drive up and down Highway 1 at speed. I will give you odds that you will not hit that hightailing, loose horse when it darts in front of you.

Other than power, there is very little difference between the 525i and the 535i when driven with BMW's standard gear box, the 3.5-liter 5 produces 208-hp at 5,700 rpm, which is 40 more ponies than the 525i develops at 5,800 rpm. Our test 535 was equipped with a three-mode program automatic. Its range from Economy to Sport to Manual complemented the new 5's flexible personality.

BMW's new 5 series has reached plateau's beyond sheer performance that have set midsize luxury sports sedan standards for the '90s. If a base price of $36,745 for the 525i seems testy for the world's best handling sedan, read the balance of the entire portfolio.

What A Success!

I KNOW you've heard a lot about the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and Visitor and Convention Bureau's Spring Trade Fair held last Thursday at the Doubletree. If you attended, you know how fun, festive and informative it was. If you didn't attend, let me tell you what you missed so you can plan right now not to miss the Fall Trade Fair (ideas are already being discussed, and it's expected to be even more spectacular this fall!).

Besides the hundreds of people socializing and getting to know the owners/proprieters of 85 local businesses — besides the popcorn, cotton candy, hot dogs, pastries and other refreshments filling the DeAnza ballroom with a host of heavenly smells — besides the eye-catching booths ranging from demonstrations to simple information, to providing fancy displays of jewelry, accessories, fashions and wares — besides several fashion models mingling throughout the crowd in on-going fashion shows — besides the fabulous door prizes and celebrities mentioned in previous columns — here's an example of additional booth prizes offered by individual businesses:

Tucker Van & Storage, Inc., — Overnight at the Coachman's Inn, dinner buffet at Rancho Canada.

La Reina Winery — A magnum of their famous chardonnay wine.

Monterey County Bank — A $50 U.S. Savings Bond.

The Midas Touch — Gift certificates for full body massage, on-site massage or a salt rub.

White Water Works — A kitchen sink water filter.

KMBY 107 Rocks — Box seats for the Giants, brunch at Ventana Inn in Big Sur.

Mary Kay Cosmetics — Luscious body care products and nail accessories.

Susan Bloch (extraordinary clothing and gifts) — $25 gift certificate.

Chateau Julien, Inc. — Bottle of limited release wine.

Jocelyn's — Centerpiece basket.

Pajaro Valley Bank — Elegant pen set.

Blake's Bookshop (As featured in the May issue of Entrepreneur Magazine —congratulations, Marsha!)— $25 gift certificate.

Roaring Camp & Big Trees Railroad — Two free tickets for Santa Cruz Big Trees and Pacific Railway train rides from the mountains to the sea in Santa Cruz.

Resort II Me — One night at the Victorian Inn, one night at Monterey Bay Inn, one night at Carmel Inn By-the-Sea, one night at the Spindrift.

Upjohn Health Care Services — beautiful brass sculpture, personal color analysis.

KOCN — Ongoing "Listen at work and win" entry certificates (win between $105 and $1,005).

John Locke Financing Services — A financial plan by John Locke.

The Housekeeping Professionals — Two hours of free housekeeping.

P.S. I Do Windows — $25 gift certificate.

KXDC — Dinner for two at the Fishery, with elegant Image Limousine Service.

KCBA TV-35 — Liters of Pepsi; chance of TV exposure.

United Express Airlines — For everyone, laminated personal business card/luggage tag; note pads.

Norrell Services Inc. — Clock radio, elegant gold and glass desk clock.

Harbor Realty — Cuoroc Tray.

Chamisal Tennis Club & Fitness Center and Carmel Valley Racquet Club — One free membership at each club.

Bee Epstein Associates — Brian Tracy video featuring 24 techniques for closing a sale.

Mind you, this list doesn't cover even one-half of the booths. I tried my darndest to visit each one, but there was so much to see, and so many people to say "Hi" to, not to mention stopping twice to help announce and distribute those fabulous door prizes, I just ran out of time.

Speaking of prizes, three booths were given awards for having the most outstanding displays. Congratulations to Economic Development Corporation, Pacific Monthly magazine, and Adventures-By-the-Sea!

Anyway, maybe the next trade fair will run longer than three hours. It was like shopping in a mini-mall, and I just couldn't get enough!

See you at the Fall Trade Fair!

New manager

THE CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA Chapter of the American Red Cross has named its new chapter manager. Starting May 8 Lynette Balesteri begins her tenure at the chapter at Eighth and Dolores. She is a sixth generation native Californian and has resided on the peninsula for the past 22 years. She recently held an executive position at La Playa Hotel in Carmel for eight years. "The board of directors was most satisfied with her," said Phil Gray, chapter public relations representative. "In my personal opinion she'll be excellent." Balesteri replaces Judith Dunham, who only held the post for about two months. The position had been vacant since March 1. Lynette and her husband Peter, son Matthew and daughter Amy live in Pacific Grove where she is active in PTA, Pony Baseball and teaches CPR. (Alan McEwen photo.)

announced plans for the local observance of Law Day 1989. On the peninsula, two full days of attorney speakers and public information about the law will be available at Del Monte Center, Monterey. The public is invited to attend all or portions of the program. There will be no charge to attend the talks or for printed materials.

Law Day is established each year to call attention of the American citizens to both the principles and the practice of American law and justice. This year's theme is "Access to Justice" and one goal of the local observance is to inform citizens about the laws which affect their lives and the organizations which aid the citizen in understanding these laws.

The program at Del Monte Center will be on Saturday, May 6 and Sunday, May 7. Speakers will be practicing attorneys from the following organizations: California Rural Legal Assistance, Legal Services for Seniors, Monterey College of Law Alumni Association, Monterey County Bar Association, Legal Services Corporation, Trial Lawyers Association, Women Lawyers Association, and Young Lawyers Association. Del Monte Center is co-sponsoring the programs as a public service.

Information tables will be in the mall; the speakers will be in the former Wells Fargo Building, between Macy's and Mervyn's.

On both days, tables of information will be available with representatives from various groups which offer assistance to citizens in understanding and using the law.

Interested individuals are urged to attend part or all of the programs to learn more about the law and how it affects their lives.

A similar program is being presented in Salinas at Hartnell College also on May 6 and 7. It is co-sponsored by the same Legal Education Consortium and the Office of Community Education at the college. Call Monterey College of Law (373-3301) for information about either program.

SMART WOMEN PROJECT SET FOR MAY 4

The American Cancer Society will kick off its 1989 Smart Women Project on Thursday, May 4, with a luncheon at the Corral de Tierra Country Club in Salinas from 11:45 a.m. to 1:45 p.m.

Speakers will present vital information on mammography and breast self-examination. They will also answer questions about the upcoming Smart Women Low-Cost Mammography Screening Project. The project enables eligible women to receive a baseline mammogram at the reduced rate of $50, a savings of almost 2/3 the usual cost.

The project is being funded by a $15,000 grant from the Harden Foundation. Last year 550 women in Monterey and San Benito Counties received first-time mammograms, with 49 referred to their doctors for follow-up examinations. This year the society hopes to reach more than 1,000 women in an effort to detect breast cancer in its earliest stages.

For reservations for the kick-off luncheon, call the American Cancer Society office in Monterey at 372-4521.

Christian lunch has new home

After many years of looking for a permanent home, the Christian Business Lunch, sponsored by Seaside Assembly of God, has finally found a home—in the Fellowship Hall of Seaside Assembly of God.

The hall was previously in use by the Monterey Bay Christian School, which has now moved to a new building. Volunteers from the church's Women's Ministries prepare and serve the food, and there is a choice of hot or cold dishes and dessert. Payment is by donation.

Anyone wanting a good lunch and Christian fellowship is welcome to try the lunch any Tuesday from 12 noon at the church, 1184 Hilby Avenue, Seaside.

Program participants are drawn from local membership of Church Women United using words of women of the Bible to express consolation, inspiration and support in times of crisis.

All are welcome for coffee and fellowship at 10 a.m. followed by the program at 10:30.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Let us be crisp and ready to serve

Carmel Pine Cone
May 10, 1979

When we travel we find many people claim to speak our language and do not. For example, in Manila you order a cup of coffee and bacon and eggs—the waiter says "O.K. boss" and brings tea, liver and onions and a balut—a pregnant duck egg refuted to cure all ills. He says, "O.K. boss? I speak good English, no?"

We say we speak English and, of course, we speak another language, Americanese. So for the benefit of our English visitors I will recite in their language this more or less official British Rotary grace. It manages to rhyme good with food.

O Lord, the giver of all good,
We thank Thee for our daily food.
May Rotary friends and Rotary ways
Help us to serve Thee all our days.

Here is another:

O Lord preserve us from being like old-fashioned porridge—stiff and hard to stir. But rather, keep us like modern corn flakes—crisp and ready to serve.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Automatic retirement at age 65 was one of life's certainties not so long ago. Says business author Peter Drucker, "No forecast I ever made was greeted with greater derision than the prediction (in 1978) that in another 10 years — mandatory retirement would be pushed beyond age 65 and that mandatory retirement at any fixed age might be altogether abolished." Congress in 1986 outlawed forced retirement at any age. The American Association of Retired Persons cites studies showing that there are no significant differences between older and younger workers in ability to learn, in absenteeism or job performance.

Why does hair get gray? Slowing production of pigment in hair follicles is the reason. Most graying is determined by genetics and is irreversible, says the National Institute on Aging. What's more, the institute says: "Although many people consider graying or baldness a sign of aging, neither is harmful in and of itself, nor are they generally an indication of 'aging' in any other body system."

A RESCUE WORKER holds an oil-encrusted seabird: ecological damage could last years.

By Matt Snowden

Thursday night, March 23. A disaster happened. "We predicted that there would be a great oil spill at Valdez. We were told again and again that the oil companies would handle it..."

Those are the words of Sierra Club Chairman Michael McCloskey. At least one of those oil companies could not handle it. As ten to twelve million gallons of oil flowed out of the Exxon Valdez in Prince William Sound, Alaska, the captain was in his cabin. Because he had had too much to drink, he turned the ship over to an inexperienced helmsman. The ship ran onto a reef and the result is an environmental disaster that is expected to be felt for many years to come.

Exxon assured the world that the situation was under control. The first cleanup crews and equipment did not get to the spill until 10 hours after it happened. Most of the cleanup equipment was old and damaged as there was not sufficient funding to maintain it.

By Sunday, 70 MPH winds were blowing the oil over the sound. Birds, fish, and marine animals that are not killed immediately by the crude oil will still be in danger, as the bottom oil contaminates first the microorganisms, then the small fish that eat them, and on up the food chain.

There is no excuse for the tragedy that happened in Alaska. Let's just make sure that it is the last tragedy.

Rites of Spring

Picnic Review

By Mario Augustine

I patiently waited in the Pocket Playhouse at CHS for the play being presented, "Picnic", by the Carmel High students. It was going to be a new experience, for I had never been to a play where I knew virtually nothing about the plot.

The play was performed beautifully. All of the actors and actresses acted suprisingly professional for high school students. There were exceptional performances by James Witherell. Mona Johnson, and Karen Strutyinski. The stage crew should also be commended for making everything run smoothly. Victoria Gilbert also did an excellent job as the play's director.

This play was extremely "well rounded." It involved bits of comedy, tragedy, romance, and danger. The base-plot involved the romance between a farm girl and a wanderer in a Mid-west town.

School Naziism

By Kyle Zook

You know, I've been sitting around here, just watching all of you people without really commenting. Except now. The time has come! The facts must be revealed about Carmel High's greatest problem; school Naziism!!

Naziism is a common problem. It's slang for a dictatorship, which is what this school is, theoretically. Take Dennis and Woody. True, they are only symptoms of a dictatorship, and perhaps they might even be really nice people, but like it or not, they are not here to be your friends. They're here to do their job, and if you get in the way, they'll crush you like a grape.

The common offenders are the Carmel High smokers. There just happens to be a high number of smokers here, a number estimated at nearly 20 percent. That's just the estimation. The big problem is these smokers, nicotine fit or no nicotine fit, cannot smoke on campus. Sophomores and freshmen are not allowed off campus. Seniors and juniors whose mommy has not signed the permission slip to get an off-campus pass are not allowed off campus. Some of these people are of the legal smoking age of 18. What on earth are they going to do with school Naziism rearing its ugly head? Either the smokers can walk off campus illegally, or they can smoke on campus illegally. It's a no-win situation.

Smoking on campus has been declared illegal (and immoral) by the State Legislature of California. Well, that's easy for them to do, they aren't afraid of any voter backlash from us. They're pretty safe to screw up our lives any way they want.

Well, all I know is, as soon as I find out who's in charge, they're getting a letter from me. Or maybe even a petition. Something, anything, to keep ther issue open and in front of them. And if they don't cooperate, they aren't getting my vote next election year. That's for sure.

An expensive evening?

By Clyde Klaumann

Have you ever noticed how people start getting uptight, real touchy, and sometimes just purely ticked off when it comes time to get a date and make all the necessary arrangements from PROM? For many people, especially girls, prom is a real stressful time. How can that be? To me, getting ready for prom should be fun. After all, if you're a senior, it is your dance, put on for you by the Junior Class. The reason prom is such a big deal to so many, is simply because they make a big deal of it.

People these days feel that they need to go to the nicest restaurant, drive around in the finest limo, and wear the finest tux and/or formal. Basically, these people are spending far too much money for something most of them will say wasn't that great because of their date, the expensive restaurant that they got sick at, the fine limo that broke down, the dozen other people who had the same fine tux and/or formal, or the party after prom that wasn't much of a party. It seems like those people who do all the above, (mainly to impress their date) are the ones who do the complaining because the date doesn't want anything more from them after prom other than to be just friends.

The reason I am omitting those who go to prom with their boyfriend, or girlfriend is because they don't need to impress each other (at least they shouldn't have to) and I'm sure the girl would rather have the bou spend all that extra money on her some other way. Am I correct? I feel those who will have the best time, will be the ones who aren't out to impress their date, but rather to have a nice dinner (possibly at nice restaurant) and don't feel rushed throughout the evening and at the dance because the chauffeur in the fine limo is counting the hours.

Well, to all those who went to prom, I hope you enjoyed yourself, and all your money went to good use. If you are one of those who fits this article though, I am really sorry, but I would recommend trying the less stressful, nice evening approach on your next date.

The Sandpiper — mundane?

By Kyle Zook

Charges of "mundaneness" have been issued about the staff's handling of the Sandpiper. Well, perhaps it's true, so what?

You might as well realize, the Sandpiper, mundane or not, is student run. Especially now. Theoretically, no one can stop us from printing anything we want, so long as it isn't obscene, libelous, or potentially disruptive (Editor's Note: Say what??? I thought that was the point of all this!). In other words, we have sort of a carte blanche to print anything as mundane as the Carmel Unified underground newspaper (I use the term "underground" lightly).

There's only one small problem. There's no one to write these hard-hitting articles about AIDS, marriage and/or divorce, teen suicide, etc. A paper run by students has to have students to write for it. Yet, every time an issue for the Sandpiper appears for the general populace, I continue to hear complaints that there are no articles dealing with AIDS, etc. Well, there's absolutely no reason why these articles don't appear here except for yourselves.

When are you guys going to wake up? This isn't a public service here, even though it's our duty to inform. And you'll have to admit that there is a lack of hard-hitting news here around Carmel. Yet, that doesn't mean that nothing goes on around here. A lot happens. Interview some people on their attitudes about drugs and sex. Write an article and give it to the ever-present Tony Boyd. We'll probably even print it, and you'll be immortalized. What have you got to lose, except a little time and effort (and think about how much time you waste watching television)?

Well, that's all I've got to say. Who wants to get up on the soapbox next?

The importance of the dolphin

By Jenny Slaughter

Every year, 75,000 to 150,000 dolphins are shamelessly slaughtered by greedy fishermen. In the wild, dolphins survive by following the schools of tuna. However, tuna fishermen need to earn a living and unfortunately they do it by using gill nets. These nets are very easy and effective to use for tuna, but when dolphins are involved, and usually are, they prove to be death traps. The fishermen don't bother to help the dolphins and many drown. The sad fact is that when the nets are pulled up to the boats, there are usually more dead dolphins than tuna.

To solve this problem, I suggest using lines and hooks. I understand that way is time consuming and costly but I believe it's worth the life of a dolphin. I do agree that gill nets are the easiest way to catch tuna, but something needs to be done.

Many people agree that this slaughter must end but don't know what to do about it. I suggest writing letters to the tuna companies that ae causing this problem. These include: Star Kist, Bumble Bee, Chicken Of The Sea, Carnation, and probably many more. If you really want to help, stop buying any tuna products. A boycott is a sure way to send a message. Also, you can write to this address to express your concern:

Decapitation as a cure for dandruff

By Tarry Carapezza

Several years ago the U.S. Congress was nice enough to waste your money and their time to talk about rock music. A nice little group called the P.M.R.C. or Parents Music Resource Center, showed the Congress the most vile, sexist, disgusting musical material they could find. The P.M.R.C. tried to convince the Congress that this was the "status quo" of the rock scene. In fact, what they showed was the "lunatic fringe" of music in their minds. Those people grew up in a time that was way much more conservative than today. They seem to be stuck there.

Mrs. Tipper Gore, wife of Senator Albert Gore, is one of the founding members of the P.M.R.C. She was appalled at the lyrics to a Prince album she bought for her daughter. So, she decided to find anything else that might be offensive to her.

Currently she is being sued by musician Blackie Lawless of the band W.A.S.P. Mrs. Gore used, without permission, several lines of lyrics by Mr. Lawless in her book on rock censorship (the name I refuse to have printed.)

At the hearings Mr. Frank Zappa came forward to defend rock 'n' roll. "The P.M.R.C.'s policy reads like a Nazi handbook for toilet training. The P.M.R.C.'s cure for dandruff would be decapitation," he stated during these hearings. Mr. Zappa used audio footage from the hearings to create a song called "Porn Wars." Rock censorship is nothing new to Mr. Zappa. He had an album released in the 70's called Joe's Garage. The album is a parody of how corrupting rock music is and a world where music is illegal.

I am not a rapist, a murderer, or a drug addict, yet I have listened to this music almost all my life. The suit and tie guys want to abolish that music. Think of a world where there is no music. Now, it may not be your music today,but what about tomorrow?

Who is going to be the judge of what is good or bad music? The youth of America can't let a bunch of old uptight people make their choices for them. Stand up and let your voice be heard by those in the government. You may not be able to vote but you do have a voice.

Maybe

By Anthony Boyd

Today I was accused of walking the middle-line as far as my beliefs go. I was told that my writing was consistently "gray" and non-committal, and I should stand up for what I believe.

Consider me standing.

A question: what gives anyone the right to judge? Supposing my writing is gray, then I ask, what am I standing up for? Dirty Closets? Electron Earth? I didn't know my articles were the center of debate. I thought I was being entertaining.

Okay, I should stand up for what I believe. But my mind is a melting pot of ideas, so what should I do if I have no idea what my belief is?

Most of the beliefs I do have are middle of the road in themselves! Every thought I have is a compromise, such as: I believe every person has a right to print whatever they please, whether it be a love story or a detailed account of murder. However, I also believe that I have a right to despise the author, cut them down to size, praise them, write a rebuttal, or whatever I want.

I believe a woman has a right to an abortion...until the point where the baby is a replica of a human and can emulate all the human abilities.

I believe in God and creationism, yet I also think science and evolutionism have their merits, which is why I believe the theistic theory that God created us and let us evolve.

I believe politics is a wonderful distractin, but I feel that politicians are a most disgusting byproduct.

I don't see the big deal. Just because I have the means to present my views does not mean that I always will, and I will not confine myself to such imprisoning thoughts.

My accuser thinks I would be better off showing only my side. Well, this is as one-sided as I get.

No. I won't be one-sided. I won't write out of personal bias and nor will I impose my beliefs on others (as if it were possible). And no, thank you, but I refuse to use my position to manipulate the uninformed.

I know full well what is right and wrong, and I think I can stick to it just fine without someone who thinks they're "righter" telling me what to do and how to write. Is it possible that this person is motivated not by a sense of "rightness" but a fear that he or she can't deal with my nonconformity to their beliefs...?

So my accuser wonders why I find it so difficult to "push my view". Maybe it's because I respect my friends opinions.

Love

By Nicole Henares

Love is beautiful.
When you have love in your heart,
the feeling is indescribable.
It is that powerful.
Yet, love can be as morbid as death.
Love is strange in this perspective,
because love can make you sorrowful and happy at the same time.
Sometimes love is a trick;
what you may think is love,
is really infatuation.
But if your heart truly tells you,
that you have love in your soul,
you will never forget the feeling.

Letter to the editors

Your article on drugs is totally wrong dealing with the crack percentage. Prom is too expensive. How about if the office buys the less expensive computer to help pay for Prom? You suck. The group Fishbone is not new to the rock scene. Who runs ASB?

Why is Prom so high? $50 a couple is outrageous. We have to spend enough on dinner, outfit, and other needs. Not everyone at this school is rich!

So relax and bare down.

Literary tea, children's program set at new library

A FAMILY storytelling festival and the Spring Literary Tea are the weekend offerings of Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel. Both will be presented at the new Park Branch Library, Sixth and Mission, Carmel.

"A World of Stories" will be offered several times Saturday, May 6. At 3 p.m. on Sunday, May 7, the Spring Literary Tea will feature Sara Holmes Boutelle, author of Julia Morgan, Architect. She will speak on the noted architect's career. Admission is free to both events.

Youth Services of the Harrison Memorial Library will host A World of Stories, a one-day family storytelling festival, featuring stories told by students of the San Jose State University, Tri-County Program. Stories for young children (ages 3 to 7) will be told at 10 and 11 a.m.; stories for older children (ages 7 and up) will be told at 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. All events will be at the Park Branch of the Harrison Memorial Library, at the corner of Sixth and Mission in Carmel.

Using voice and gesture with the power of imagination, storytellers can take their listeners on flights through inner and outer space, ancient and future times. A World of Stories will include folktales, fairytales, personal and original stories as well as favorites from children's literature. The storytellers will use participation, characterization and chants to give active children an opportunity to get involved in the storytelling. Parents will be as delighted as the children with the magic of these stories.

The storytellers are all members of a San Jose State University class in storytelling, offered for the first time through the Tri-County Program, which is headquartered in Salinas. Lee-Ellen Marvin, a professional storyteller, is the instructor for the program.

"As a performer, I've always known that storytelling belongs in a community, not an isolated classroom. I want my students to discover how much more meaning a story takes on when told to a gathering of friends, neighbors and families. The students are excited about this opportunity, but they don't know yet how wonderful their stories are. I hope they see it in their listeners' eyes during A World of Stories."

For further information, contact Youth Services of the Harrison Memorial Library, 624-4664.

Sara Holmes Boutelle has been interested in Julia Morgan since her first visit to San Simeon in 1972. She has devoted 14 years to researching, writing and lecturing on Julia Morgan.

Most poeople who know of this pioneering woman architect know her as the designer and builder of the Hearst Castle, 90 miles south of Carmel at San Simeon on the California coast. Yet in her extensive career, Julia Morgan designed more than 700 buildings, both commercial and residential.

There is no charge for this event which is open to the public. Refreshments will be served.

ARTS & LEISURE

Seven Carmel Valley gardens open gates to visitors Saturday

"A PARADE of Flowers" is the theme of the Ninth Annual Garden Walk sponsored by the Carmel Valley Garden Association. Private valley gardens will be open to the public from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, May 7.

Seven private gardens, all located off Carmel Valley Road, will be marked by signs and streamers planted by the roadside. In addition, a map of these gardens will be printed on each ticket. Tickets may be purchased at any garden, or at the Chateau Julian Winery, on May 7.

Chateau Julian is 5.2 miles from Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road. Tickets will also be on sale Friday, May 5 at tables outside of Brinton's, the Carmel Valley Post Office and the Carmel Rancho Post Office. Garden walkers may visit the seven locations in any order after they purchase their tickets. Tickets are $8 and the net proceeds benefit various Carmel Valley charities.

Some of the settings and gardens the visitor will encounter include:

—A winery with a small vineyard; wine tasting offered;

—A greenhouse with a variety of orchids from all over the world;

—A hillside garden with deck plantings looking out on wilderness;

—The wonders a professional gardenperson can accomplish surrounding tennis courts and club house;

—Prize winning roses, blazes of perennials, and velvet lawns;

—An historic adobe with a setting that transports one back hundreds of years in California history; refreshments here;

—An "edible garden"—that is right—a unique blend of visual and gustatory delights;

BACH

CARMEL BACH FESTIVAL

By NANA FARIDANY
Festival Administrator

THE CARMEL BACH Festival would not run without its dedicated volunteers. At present the list of active volunteers in the computer stands at 366 people. Of course the 25-member Board of Directors is entirely voluntary, but perhaps many people do not realize the scope of work done by our volunteers. We are having a party in May to thank them for the many things they do.

Isabel Crossen is now the president of the Bach Festival Associates who entertain and gain friends for the Festival as a year-round presence in the community. The Associates is a membership organization of over 100 people who produce musical salons and a newsletter off-season, as well as giving parties for musicians during the Festival. They will be jointly sponsoring the Volunteer Party again this year as they did in 1988.

The wife of a board member, ex-president of the Bach Festival Associates and local painter, Gail Factor, will be designing and making a set for the opera. Joan De Visser, who is also on the board, runs the boutique which is a year-round job—going to trade fairs and stocking her shelves. She even acts as an advisor now to other non-profits who want to run a successful boutique. She staffs the boutique with volunteers and organizes and runs the ushers for all the Festival concerts. That's around 70 ushers and a dozen salespeople. Joan is there every night of performance and often has to deal with accidents and emergencies. Did you know ushers had to learn CPR?

Louise Brace, Kathryn Farr and Peggy Aitkenhead have for many years taken complete responsibility for the robing of the Festival Chorale and Chorus, the mission orchestra, and the soloists. White robes are kept clean and ironed and fitted to individuals and red velvet robes are assigned for the festival mission concert. This year Pam Smith and Becky Hanna are overall supervisors and organizers of the stupendous task of party giving in honor of participants and patrons alike. Over 70 parties are regularly given and these redoubtable ladies have many helpers who devote themselves to making a particular festivity beautiful and efficient.

For several years Sheilah Costain has been in charge of recruiting and keeping track of the people who form the procession in the mission concert: these people carry the heraldic banners or candles that lend particular glory to our most dramatic concert. They need to be rehearsed as do any other players. Dede Kramer organizes the younger members of the procession. In the office, she is affectionately known as "Dede and the Acolytes."

The banners for the mission concert have been made for years by Nancy Morrow, a member of the board who responded to Maestro Salgo's request for pageantry by designing and making 10 to 20 new banners each year. She begins researching her work in the winter as soon as the Maestro announces the program for the concert and her work has even taken her to the College of Heralds in London. She designs the banners using the devices representative of those major influences in the lives of the composers featured in the concert—kings, popes, princes, archbishops, and other patrons—and executes them lavishly in paint or applique with help from volunteers.

There is another much less glamorous job involved with the mission concert. At night luminaria sparkle throughout the gardens and because there is no competition from ambient light in Carmel, they are particularly effective. Have you ever considered what goes into decorating the grounds each Wednesday in this particular way? A ton of sand is delivered to the loading docks at the back and all afternoon it is carried by wheelbarrows to areas where the hundreds of paper bags are filled, their tops folded carefully down, candles inserted and lit just before the concert. All this is done by volunteers—and it takes strong backs to haul sand and bend and stoop. Luminaria cannot be left all week so must be done again—and what happens if it rains!

Volunteers shield the office staff from the onslaught of the public during the Festival itself, by manning the telephones—four lines. Joan Sitton, Joan Hull and Clell Harrison were among these helpers in 1988. Norma Esselstyn is particularly good at this because she used to answer the phones for an office of four psychiatrists. When the office is full of musicians needing music, housing, food, chiropractors, ear, nose and throat specialists, space to practice or rehearse, or their hands held, the phone rings constantly on all four lines: "Hello...is this the mid-Valley Chevron?" "Hello...my husband and I have been coming to the Festival for 32 years and..." "Do you have any need of a hot dog concession at your event." "Just what is the Carmel Beach Festival, anyway?" "Hello, this is just to inform you that we will be coming in to inspect the fire extinguishers in a half hour..." Kind, quiet voices give useful information and deflect these enquiries or requests for reassurance from the staff. All during the year pots of flowers are brought to cheer the office by John Castello—brother-in-law of the niece of Festival founder, Dene Denny.

It is said that cerebral work burns more calories than physical exertion, and judging from the amount of food consumed at rehearsal and performance breaks by our hard worked players and singers it seems to be so. At 9:30 every morning and again in the evening around 7:30 people appear as if from the air and wash fruit, chop vegetables, butter bread, display cookies and cake, until the table in the green room groans. Fifteen minutes later, the table is empty again and there is the cleaning up to be done. Tweet and Briar Thorngate organized a roster of people to do this for 33 days last summer.

Often there is a person who has been doing a particular task for love for many years, so if you need the Maestro miked for a preview party or a recording played for a lecture, the word goes out. "Call John Pratt." He comes in seemingly from nowhere, the job is done and he vanishes. Magic. Likewise with Nancy Opsata and the writing in of English words in the Maestro's opera score. We do the opera in translation and we don't have an edition with the right translation set up next to the notes. Nancy even had to sit in rehearsals for "The Marriage of Figaro" and dash up to the podium when there was a break to write in some more words while the Maestro mopped his brow and took a breather. 320 pages of score in half light. Nancy is also a volunteer on two other levels—singing in the local chorus, and housing another musician from out of town.

The local chorus is a very important aspect of the spiritual purpose of our Festival which began as a celebration by a community of the greatness and influence of Bach. Local singers are irreplaceable in creating that sense of community involvement. Thirty-five people who pass through the grueling audition rehearse with Ken Ahrens, our organist and chorus director, on Monday evenings from March to July and then July rehearse with the Chorale and Orchestra day and night. Some of them have to get special dispensations from their jobs to do so.

Nancy Opsata also houses Xiao-Hong Liang, a Bay Area violinist, in her Pacific Grove house and consequently has developed a great appreciation for Chinese cooking. Many local people open their houses to our musicians for the 33 days they are here. Some guests and hosts have become fast friends and the arrangement continues year after year—as is the case with Alice Felix and Southern California singer Jody Golightly, or the Caddicks and Robert Heinzman. This is not only of great financial benefit to the Festival, since it means fewer houses to rent, but again it involves people from the community intimately with the musicians and helps them to feel a part of Carmel.

The morning and afternoon recitals are manned by another group of volunteers led for many years by Arnie Torri and now by Jean and Lee Edwards. These people help set up the room, sell tickets and account for the money, usher people in and close up afterwards for 21 performances, and then make a written report of attendance and ticket sales.

These invaluable helpers are in addition to the 110 people who are paid for their services to the Festival. It would be impossible to mention everyone by name who has contributed. I mention only a few because it is interesting to hear what individuals actually do in their Festival capacity. We could not ever afford to hire this labor given with such devotion and its receipt lends the Festival a joyous spirit, so that musicians often remark, "My summer in Carmel has been one of the happiest in my life."

(This monthly column serves to highlight year-round the efforts of the Carmel Bach Festival. It is edited by Carmel Bach Festival staff members and volunteers. The 52nd annual festival will take place July 17 through Aug. 6.)

FIRST DAY Back, a gouache on rag board painting by Claire Thorson, is party of the "Necessity of Images" collection opening Saturday, May 6 at the Cherry Foundation Gallery in Carmel. The show continues through May 27.

Group show opens at Cherry Foundation Gallery

"THE NECESSITY of Images," a three-artist exhibition chronicling personal and lyrical terrain as well as the vivid landscape of the Central Coast, will open for a three-week show at the Cherry Foundation on Saturday, May 6.

The three Santa Cruz artists—Wendy Barrett, Betsy Miller and Claire Thorson—work in a range of styles and media, from Barrett's atmospheric figurative scenes, to the animated personal mythology of Miller's still-lifes, to Thorson's lush evocation of the Big Sur mountains.

Barrett, who employs waterbase paint on ragboard, concentrates on haunting figurative paintings that are dramatic episodes of delicacy and introspection. Her animated cast is composed of symbolic forms used to render "motherhood, life and death." Barrett has had solo and group exhibitions in the Monterey and Santa Cruz areas. Currently, she resides in Soquel.

Using muted, secondary colors, Betsy Miller's works in acrylic are highly personalized representations of objects from her life which she's used to tell an allegorical story of injury and recovery.

Miller, who has had exhibitions at the Santa Cruz Historical Museum, the Triton Museum in Santa Clara and a half dozen group showings, lives in Santa Cruz where she is the host of KUSP radio's "State of the Arts."

Using color that is atmospheric and luminous, Claire Thorson paints the vibrant landscape of the Big Sur mountains near the Tassajara Zen Center where she works part of the year. Fusing the Japanese esthetic of simplicity and naturalness with the western plein air tradition, Thorson creates a vivid, concentrated documentary of the coastal range.

"All the work has been painted on site at Tassajara. The paintings include a range of response and some different kinds of observation. One of my stronger sensations is of the mass and movement in the land," Thorson says. She has shown her work in solo and group shows in Santa Cruz, San Francisco and Pacific Grove.

A reception for the artists will be held at the Cherry Foundation on Saturday, May 6 from 2 to 4:30 p.m. The exhibition will be on display through May 27.

The Cherry Foundation is located at the corner of Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel. The gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

The exhibition is made possible, in part, through a grant from the Monterey County Cultural Council.

Pet owners: beware the hurtsome foxtail

A life-threatening menace to your best friend is lurking in the tall springtime grasses of Monterey County. What is more insidious, people may not be aware of this danger until it has caused pain and suffering and sometimes even the death of a pet.

The menace is the foxtail. Artfully designed by nature to disperse itself by sticking and burrowing, that is what it does when your dog encounters one or more while frolicking in tall grass. The barbed end burrows into ears, between foot pads, lodges itself behind the "third eyelid" and can actually migrate through the skin.

Any dog or cat who roams where tall grasses grow should be examined daily.

THEATER REVIEW

By James P. Kinney

'Agnes of God' opens at Cherry Hall

PRESENTING THE kind of intimate and thought-provoking theater with which he has become deservedly identified now for quite a few years locally, director Nick Zanides opened John Pielmeier's play Agnes of God this past weekend at the Cherry Theater, Fourth and Guadalupe in Carmel.

First staged at the Actor's Theatre of Louisville and then brought to the screen in a riveting movie that starred Jane Fonda and Anne Bancroft, Agnes of God pits the insights of 20th century psychiatry against the centuries' old religious mysticism of a women's contemplative order in the Catholic Church.

Sister Agnes (Jeanne Wooster), a young novice in a convent somewhere in North America, is accused of murdering her newborn baby within the convent's walls. Dr. Martha Livingston (Marlie Avant), a court-appointed psychiatrist, is sent out to examine Agnes to see if she is mentally fit to stand trial for a crime or whether she should be committed to a hospital as criminally insane.

The psychiatrist runs into formidable opposition in the person of Mother Miriam Ruth (Gertrude Chappell), mother superior of the convent. The action of the play deals mainly with the contest of wills between the two able and strong-minded women as the psychiatrist tries to uncover the events leading up to the newborn child's death and the identity of the father while the cagey old nun uses the tools of religious mysticism, theology and her own native wit to defend her young religious charge.

At first defensive and antagonistic towards each other, the two women gradually develop a grudging mutual respect and even a tentative friendship as new revelations and insights make clear how complex and confusing the motives and incidents were leading up to what may or not have been a crime.

"I'm not from the Inquisition," the doctor acidly barks at the mother superior early in their encounters.

"And I'm not from the Middle Ages," fires back the mother superior tartly.

Even young Sister Agnes, who at first appears dreamy, detached and defenseless, shows weapons of her own as she resists the attempts of the psychiatrist to fathom her state of mind.

Agnes: "I don't think God would listen to you."

Livingston: "Why not?"

Agnes: "Because you don't listen to Him."

Everything about this production contributes to the finely focused and intense conflict. Even before the play begins, the austere stone walls and gothic arches of the convent (set design by Roger Thompson and Avant; construction by Phil Pratt), the ethereal lighting which suffuses the convent and includes a wonderful projection of a rose window on the set's back wall (lighting design by Richard Lasater) and background Gregorian Chant sung in unison by female voices before and during the action of the play (though done at times to a slightly calypso beat discernible to this experienced ear) put the audience in a proper frame of mind.

The three actresses onstage (excusing a few opening night's stumbles and jitters) were uniformly excellent. Marlie Avant's Dr. Livington, edgy, chain-smoking and combative at first, gradually reveals herself a compassionate and vulnerable humanity.

Gertrude Chappell, with the superb timing of a veteran performer and her wonderfully gothic voice — filled with old memories and worldly judgments — instills her Mother Miriam with a mordant wit and hardy intelligence immediately recognizable and with delight by those of us privileged to have known such remarkable "women of the cloth" during our lifetimes. And Jeanne Wooster, with her lovely singing voice and youthful innocence, displays an impressive emotional range as she moves from childlike dependency through stubborn resistance about her mysterious pregnancy to abject terror when confronting the demons inside her at the moment of the child's death.

What it all adds up to is an evening of excellent live theater and an unqualified recommendation from this critic. Agnes of God plays the next two weekends, Fridays and Saturdays, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, May 7 at 7 p.m. Given the Cherry's limited seating, play-goers are encouraged to make advance reservations or arrive well before curtain time on performance nights.

DR. LIVINGSTON (Marlie Avant, left), Agnes (Jeanne Wooster) and Mother Miriam (Gertrude Chappell) are all stunned by the stigmata that appear on Agnes' hands in Agnes of God. The play is directed by Nick Zanides, and continues Fridays through Sundays at Cherry Hall, Guadalupe and Fourth, Carmel.

A CARMEL TRADITION SINCE 1937

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Bojangles bio cast

THEY THOUGHT Scotty Wright had the right stuff. And so this young jazz singer from the Monterey Peninsula has been signed to play Bill (Bojangles) Robinson in a feature film about the great entertainer.

Scotty's big break came after an unidentified tipster told producers Joseph Wouk and Clyde Ware to check him out during his last gig (4/5) at the Sheraton's Monterey Bay Club.

Wright, who came up here and studied music at Monterey Peninsula College, read for the two men and then flew through all the other tests. Negotiations occurred. Today there's a finished contract in hand and shooting was scheduled to begin this fall—"barring any unexpected snafus."

That last phrase came from columnist Robert Osborne of the Hollywood Reporter. He printed the basic facts last month. Scotty's manager, the very bright British woman named Tup Lohse, furnished details as this corner sought to break the full story locally.

Scotty and Tup keep an office in Walnut Creek. While she and I completed a telephone interview, he slept at his home about half an hour away.

"It has been an exciting time and right now he's rather tired," Tup said. "This film will give him a lot of exposure. Since he's a jazz singer, I imagine the jazz world will gain exposure too. Yes, I have the signed agreement right here. It stipulates that we can't reveal financial details."

What about that anonymous tipster? Tup chuckled. "We have no idea on the person's identity. Obviously it's someone with knowledge of Scotty's career as well as of what the producers had in mind. They're traveling—so I don't think you'd be able to pin them down. Letting the mystery remain a mystery might be even more fun."

Bojangles: The Bill Robinson Story. That project obviously will call upon Scotty to dance. How did this part of the assignment strike him and Tup? "Remember that Scotty studied dance," she said, "and that he's no stranger to stage productions. He did Up With People and college shows. Intense practice will be necessary. But Scotty's a movie fanatic who has a lot of love for Bill Robinson. He already knows a surprising amount about Bojangles. More research has begun."

Producers Wouk and Ware (Clyde Ware will direct the Bojangles bio) gave Scotty on-camera experience by putting him in another of their films. It was a western called Bad Jim with Clark Gable's son. By the time these words appear in print, Wright probably will have completed his portion of the Arizona shoot.

"In this one," Tup said, "Scotty's a saloon piano player. The producers also asked Scotty to write some original music for that movie. He did so—and what he wrote remains under consideration. The word we got was that shooting on the Bojangles story will begin no later than January or February of next year. We're eager—as soon as we know when and where, we're off and running."

Scotty Wright, according to his manager, "will always be a jazz singer. As a management company, we're interested in promoting jazz—in gaining wider exposure for truly talented jazz people."

On that note, Tup Lohse announced that she now has a management contract with local jazz musician Kenny Stahl. Kenny's flutes front Tuesday night jam sessions at Jimmy's American Place (Carmel Rancho Center).

Area, Harvey worked throughout Europe and went on a world tour with Ray Charles. Backing him here will be fine pianist John Donaldson, drummer Ken Wollesen, Stan Poplin on bass.

Other Bay Club bookings: Gail Dobson (5/4), Nora Cruz (5/5), Ronnie Barnes (5/6), pianist Bob Phillips with Terry Miller on bass (5/7), Duo Du Jour (5/8), Jack and Ed Show (5/9).

The Pete Escovedo Orchestra comes in Thursday night (5/4) with Pete's famed daughter Sheila taking a featured role. Place: The Club in downtown Monterey. Shows at 7:30 and 10. No opening act—early arrival encouraged.

At this writing, management had not firmed up the door charge. Advance tickets ($15 per) still were available at Recycled Records in Monterey, Seaside's Music World, The Club itself. Info: 646-9244.

It was my pleasure to hear Sheila on congas and timbales long before she became known as Sheila E. She was brilliant at those Latin jams in Berkeley and still surpasses all the hype.

Now, the word "exquisite" must be used with care. This's understood. Exquisite jazz vocalist Shirley Horn will appear on Monday evening (5/8) at Kuumbwa Jazz Center in Santa Cruz. It's $11.50 per with an eight o'clock kick. Center Stage Ticketing serves up advance treatment.

Discovered by Miles Davis in the '50s, Miss Horn left jazz to raise her family. Since returning early in this decade, she has been most active on the international festival circuit and with Steeplechase Records. Quincy Jones says it's she who influenced Roberta Flack.

Miss Horn plays piano for herself. Her timing and phrasing make all the usual adjectives seem silly. She'll bring her longtime support—drummer Charles Ables, Steve Williams on bass.

Percy Gray's western landscapes focus of museum show

"THE LYRIC LANDSCAPE," a collection of 36 paintings by Percy Gray, can be viewed through May 28 at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History.

A public reception is set 2:30 p.m. Sunday, May 7 at the museum, located and Forest and Central avenues in Pacific Grove.

Born in San Francisco in 1869, Gray attended the San Francisco Art Association's California School of Design, studying under painter Emil Carlsen. He later served as sketch artist and art department head for William Randolph Hearst's New York Journal.

In 1906 Gray returned to San Francisco to work for Hearst's Examiner. He was later to win numerous awards in his fine art pursuits and moved to Monterey in 1923, where he purchased the historic Casa Bonifacio or Sherman Rose adobe. Grey died in 1952.

According to Donald Cleland Whitton, "A striking aspect of Gray's work is its double strength—a strength of style and of place. One recognizes a Gray not only by its distinctive composition but also by the remarkable sense of locale it projects. The subtle differences of regional topography are particularly well delineated in his watercolors, evoking the individual character of the different areas he painted, especially San Mateo, Alameda, Marin, and Monterey counties.

His watercolor style developed gradually over a span of more than 50 years. In works just after 1906, his point of view began to formalize; he eschewed large perspectives and focused on scenes relatively close at hand, while employing his color in generally flat, two-dimensional patterns. His objective, quite clearly, was to capture the atmosphere of a place rather than to document its minutiae."

Several paintings at this exhibition will also be available for purchase. For additional information, call the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History, 372-4212.

SPRINGTIME in the Valley, a watercolor by Percy Gray signed and dated 1931, is among Gray's works that will be exhibited through May 28 at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. Several of the artist's paintings will also be available for purchase. For exhibit details, call 372-4212.

Local high school musicians score in jazz festival competition

By JOHN DETRO

LOCAL TEENS did very well indeed when they went for it during Monterey Jazz Festival's 19th annual statewide student competition at the fairgrounds last weekend.

Eddie Mendenhall of Robert Louis Stevenson School won the pianist's job with the MJF High School All-Stars.

Pacific Grove High's Jason Silzle nailed down a saxophone section slot (he plays alto) in the same All-Stars portion of the competition.

Andy Coleman of Pacific Grove High ended up as second alternate All-Stars drummer.

How did Eddie feel about the hard-won honor? "Mellow," he grinned.

Jason's bandmates sent up a group roar. Jason's joy expressed itself via a few energetic shouts.

All-Stars go through closed individual auditions with such professional players as pianist Tee Carson (out of the Basie Band), trumpeter Bill Berry (MJF music director), famed baritone saxist Jack Nimitz. Winners qualify for the annual Japan tour in July and pocket valuable scholarships — $500 apiece, for example, from the Summer Jazz Camp of Youth Music Monterey.

In other results, Berkeley High won Best Combo, Pleasanton's Amador Valley High got Best Big Band, and Mt. Pleasant High (San Jose Unified District) drew Best Vocal Group Honors. These victories bring substantial cash awards to the schools' jazz studies units.

(For behind-the-scenes coverage of the youth competition, see next week's Jazz Tides column in this newspaper.)

A total of 32 teams will participate in the 1989 Pebble Beach Rugby Classic. The 1988 Classic Champions, the Old Blues, from Berkeley, will return to the Pebble Beach Classic with hopes of bringing home the championship for another year.

In addition there will be featured matches between the top seeded foreign team, The Public School Wanderers and U.S.A. Select XV on Saturday May 6 at 2 p.m. The Wanderers are the last team to defeat the New Zealand All Blacks, the most dominating team in rugby, in the 1985 Hong Kong Sevens.

Carl Jung enthusiasts meet

AN INFORMAL potluck and reception will be followed by a lecture/discussion when the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung meet Friday, May 5 at the First Presbyterian Church of Monterey. The subject will be "The Lover and the Serpent: C.G. Jung's Psychology and Sufism." The evening begins at 6:30 p.m. at the church, located at 501 El Dorado St. in Monterey.

Llewellyn Vaughan-Lee, Ph.D. will provide the lecture and then lead discussion, stressing how it is that dream materials are an essential factor in Jung's theory of the individuation process and in the "Golden Sufi" path to enlightenment. He will also allude to the subject of his doctoral dissertaion, "Archetypal Imagery in Shakespeare's Hamlet."

Another part of his presentation will include his experience with the teachings of Irina Tweedie, the first western woman to be trained in the Sufi spiritual tradition, and the author of Daughter of Fire, a diary of her spiritual growth. Her teachings also emphasize the importance of dreams to spiritual development.

The public is invited to both the potluck and to the presentation by Dr. Vaughan-Lee, which will begin at about 7:45 p.m. Everyone is encouraged to bring their favorite recipe for sharing with others. Beverages and plates, utensils will be provided.

The Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung is now an informal group of people who are sharing an enthusiasm for making practical applications of the Swiss psychologist's seminal ideas.

Modest donations are requested. For further information, call or write, 649-8809; 899-B Drake Ave., Monterey.

Eaton signs his book on the Constitution

William Eaton, attorney and labor arbitrator, will sign his book Who Killed the Constitution? from 12:30 to 3 p.m. Saturday, May 6.

Who Killed the Constitution? The Judges v. the Law addresses the belief that the United States Supreme Court has been the faithful guardian of our Constitution, a belief, Dr. Eaton finds, that is a myth.

"It is my belief that talk about the Constitution which an average intelligent citizen cannot easily understand is something of a con game," says Eaton. "Convoluted academic language and cryptic legalese," he believes, "are a hoax invented by elitists who want to twist the Constitution to serve their own ends, and who hope to do so by employing a code language which no one else can decipher."

In his review, James J. Kilpatrick says, "the author hits hard at judicial abuses that richly deserve to be hard hit." For example, the author states, "If you wonder why it is that the guilty can laugh as they breeze out the jailhouse door for 'lack of evidence,' it may be because the Supreme Court has turned away from the common sense of the jury, and has enshrined technicalities which focus on the defendant and his desire to avoid punishment."

Eaton, a San Francisco attorney and arbitrator, received his law degree from the University of Colorado. He taught at the University of California, Berkeley, where he earned his Ph.D. in political science, and at San Jose State University, specializing in constitutional law. Dr. Eaton's publications include articles on arbitration practice, the law of evidence, and constitutional history and theory.

Eaton lives with his wife in Carmel and San Francisco.

The Thunderbird is located in The Barnyard off Highway 1 between Carmel Valley and Rio roads.

The SPCA of Monterey County reminds pet owners that the season of foxtail danger is upon us. Foxtails are seed pods, designed by nature to stick and to burrow in order to reproduce. They are incredibly efficient at sticking to your pet's coat, especially a long-haired animals, and burrowing into ears, eyes, and between the foot pads. Whenever your dog or cat has access to high grass, thoroughly check the coat, feet, ears and eyes before you put Fido or Fifi to bed for the night. Be aware that shaking of the head, chewing on paws, pawing at the head may tell you that your pet is being attacked by a burrowing foxtail and needs to see the vet.

Visit the SPCA Animal Shelter on Highway 68 across from the main entrance to The Laguna Seca Recreation Area, Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. or weekends, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call for holiday hours.

PLEASE NOTE: Pictured animals are subject to prior adoption or return to owner. Adoptions are to qualified homes only. If these animals have been adopted, there are other adorable animals in the shelter. Come on out!

RESOLUTION OF THE GOVERNING BOARD MONTEREY PENINSULA COMMUNITY COLLEGE DISTRICT. RE: INTENTION TO SEL REAL PROPERTY AND CALL FOR BIDS.

WHEREAS the Monterey Peninsula Community College (District) is the owner of certain real property known as the Orr estate residence located in Carmel-by-the-Sea California, and

WHEREAS the foregoing real property is neither now nor at the time of delivery of title or possession needed for classroom purposes, and it is in the best interest of the District that the property be sold to the highest responsible bidder subject to preferential right of sale to certain public entities and non-profit corporations as provided by Section 81363.5 Education Code and Section 54220 Government Code.

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED AND ORDERED:

1. The real property commonly known as the Orr residence, located at the southwest corner of Seventh Avenue and Monte Verde Street, Carmel-by-the-Sea, California Assessor's Parcel 10-195-01, is neither now nor at the time of delivery of title or possession needed for classroom purposes, and it is in the best interest of the District to sell the property;

2. The Governing Board declares its intention to sell the Orr estate residence subject to preferential right of purchase by certain public agencies and non-profit corporations as provided by Section 81363.5 Education Code and Section 54220 Government Code;

3. A complete legal discription and map of the property are available for inspection at the office of the Administrative Dean, Business Services, Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont, Monterey, California. At that time, the Administrative Dean will receive, open, and consider written sealed bids for the purchase of the property. District reserved the right to reject any and all bids, to withdraw its offer to sell the property, and to waive irregularities and defects in the bids. Before accepted any bid, the Administrative Dean shall call for oral bids which must exceed by five percent (5%) the highest written bid and must be confirmed in writing and signed at that time by the offeror. Minimum acceptable net cash sales price is $415,000.000. Acceptance of any bid shall not final until Governing Board ratification of such bid on Wednesday, July 12, 1989, at its regular meeting.

6. A certificated or casnier's check of not less than five percent (5%) of the written bid must accompany the written or oral bid as a bid bond. This amount will be credited towards the purchase price of the sucessful bid. Checks and bonds from unsuccessful bidders shall be returned.

7. Bids, written and oral, received at the July 5, 1989 opening shall be considered as conditional and subject to legal review. Upon acceptance of any bid by the Governing Board on July 12, 1989, District shall open an escrow within seven (7) calendar days thereafter.

8. Buyer shall pay all costs of escrow including title insurance, transfer taxes, costs of recordation and escrow fees. All prepaid taxes, insurance, sewer charges, and other assessments shall be prorated as of the close of escrow.

9. Escrow shall close within fifteen (15) days after it has been opened by District. District shall deposit into escrow a grant deed, free and clear of all liens and encumbrances except those of record. The balance of the purchase price shall be paid at close of escrow by certified or cashier's check or cash.

10. District will pay no real estate commission for this transaction.

11. District sells the described property "as is" and makes no warranty as to condition or use.

12. The Secretary of this Board shall be, and is, authorized to sign and execute all necessary documents in carrying out the sale contemplated by this resolution as authorized by the Board after consideration of bids.
